Protest Pause Urged

Douglas Scores
U.S. Over Viet

OTTAWA (CP)—Vietnam dominated debate in the Commons Monday with External Affairs Minister Martin urging restraint of Canadian criticism against the United States bombing of North Vietnam.

NDP Leader Douglas countered with an emotional appeal for a strong Canadian protest and demanded a halt in Canadian arms sales to the U.S. unless there is a guarantee they will not be sent to Vietnam.

Bryce Mackasey (L—Montreal Verdon) followed with an even more emotional denunciation of Mr. Douglas, accusing him of anti-Americanism and "nothing more than plain demagoguery."

The exchanges came as the House completed its six-day debate on Finance Minister Sharp's supplementary budget introduced in December. Budget debates are traditionally the vehicle for a wide range of topics.

Today the MPs resume study of a government bill to set up a deposit insurance corporation designed to insure individual deposits of up to $20,000 in banks and trust companies.

Mr. Martin said the government has taken no public position on bombing of North Vietnam because there is not much chance it could be stopped as the result of an appeal from Canada.

He saw the bombing as the key to resolving the Vietnam conflict "but there are other actions and responsibilities which must also be fitted into the total pattern of steps towards a peaceful settlement."

"I suggest it would be self-destructive, self-defeating, if our public statements... were to have the effect of slamming doors instead of opening them, of closing off potentially useful dialogue instead of stimulating and nurturing the confidential exchange of viewpoints," Mr. Martin said.

The minister said the time is ripe for the International Control Commission comprising Poland, India and Canada to help in bringing the Vietnam war to an end.

Mr. Martin said Canada was not always able to say publicly what it is doing behind the scenes to promote peace in the war-torn country. Commitments had been made "to the parties involved in this matter" and if they were broken "our efforts would not be respected or trusted."

Mr. Martin said there had been criticism that Canadian-made arms sold to the U.S. were being used in Vietnam. But the arms were sent to the U.S. under a 1959 defence-sharing agreement with the approval of all sections of the Commons and of the people of Canada.

Mr. Douglas said the war is the greatest moral issue of our times.

"The time for quiet diplomacy is past; the time has come to speak out."

The NDP leader said he questioned Mr. Martin's courage in not spelling out his convictions that the bombing end and a settlement be reached.

'DEEPER IN QUAGMIRE' SAY 3 U.S. SENATORS

Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D-Ark.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said:

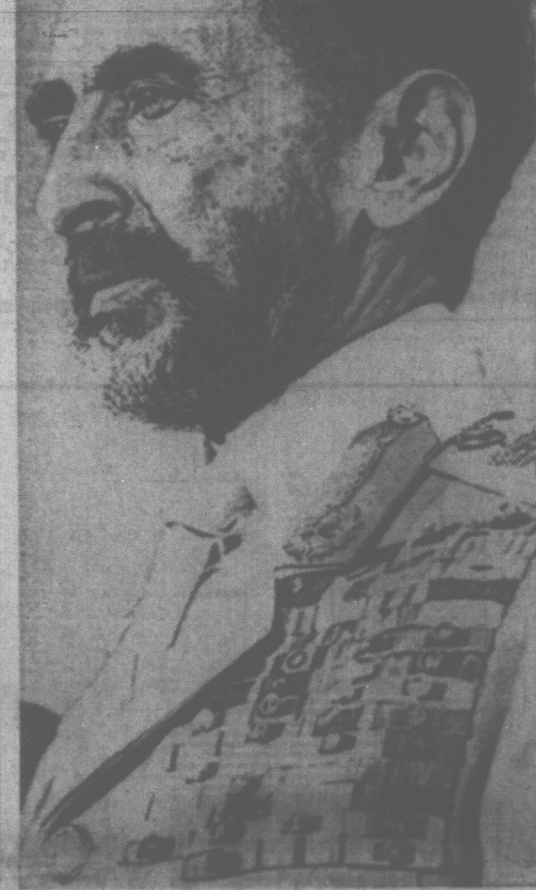

"I regret this very much. I'm sorry to hear it. 'I regret that Americans have not been able to take this matter to the peace table.'"

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), said:

"We should not have started the bombing in the first place and therefore we shouldn't continue it."

Sen. Ernest Gruening (D-Alaska), said:

"Our military commitment in Southeast Asia is an incredible piece of folly. I think the resumption of bombing is bad. We haven't accomplished anything in the two years of bombing except to stiffen resistance, prolong the war and get us deeper and deeper into the quagmire."

Kiernan Faces Counter Charge

By JOHN MIKA

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan today was to be told in the legislature that he is one of the weaknesses of Confederation which he has complained about.

The strong counter to his Monday statement charging discrimination against B.C. through "pork barrel" federal policies was to be made in the budget debate by Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound).

"We're going to answer Mr. Kiernan's complaints that there are weaknesses in Confederation by pointing out he is one of the weaknesses," said Liberal caucus chairman Dr. Pat McGeer this morning.

Secret Plan Available For Viet Peace—Wilson

Weeks Of Hope Ended

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vietnam peace prospects appear at their lowest point in two months today as U.S. bombing of North Vietnam resumed and weeks of optimistic speculation ended.

U.S. officials said peace efforts had receded to their pre-Christmas position.

President Johnson, in announcing the resumption of bombing late Monday, said he had hoped the ceasefire during the Lunar New Year "might lead to some abatement of hostilities and to moves toward peace."

But he said the North Vietnamese has used the pause "for major re-supply efforts of their troops in South Vietnam."

Johnson apparently referred to Sunday night's meeting in London between Soviet Premier Kosygin and British Prime Minister Wilson when he said:

"Despite our efforts and those of third parties, no other response has yet come from Hanoi."

Johnson earlier had indicated determination to resume the air war in the absence of any North Vietnamese easing of military activity.

INSISTED ON HALT

But the North Vietnamese insisted on a halt in U.S. bombing and withdrawal of troops before peace talks could get started.

Peace hopes began building up about two months ago when North Vietnamese officials dropped hints negotiations could start if the U.S. bombing was permanently halted.

There have been three truce intervals since December and diplomats had been particularly hopeful that the latest might bring a breakthrough in the quest for a peace formula.

In his White House statement, Johnson said: "The door to peace is and will remain open and we are prepared at any time to go more than halfway to meet any equitable overture from the other side."

Officials reiterated this meant North Vietnam must scale down its military operations if U.S. bombing of the north is to be halted.

WAR RAGES AT FULL TILT
ON BOTH SIDES OF BORDER

SAIGON (AP)—The air war returned to full swing today on both sides of the border as U.S. fighter-bombers pounded railroads and other supply routes in North Vietnam. Radio Hanoi said two were shot down. U.S. Navy vessels attacked North Vietnamese shipping.

Peking and Pyongyang broadcast pledges of continued support for the Viet Cong from China and North Korea. The messages to the guerrillas were signed by Defence Minister Lin Piao of China and Kim Chang Pong of North Korea.

There was no immediate comment here on Hanoi's report of the downing of two planes. If confirmed, the official list of American losses north of the border would rise to 475.

In South Vietnam, U.S. and South Vietnamese ground forces reported only light contact with the enemy, but U.S. pilots flew a near record 535 sorties in support of infantry Monday. The American record for one day of such single combat flights in the South is 549, set last Jan. 13.

U.S. spokesmen also announced that seven men of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division were killed and four were wounded Monday night when five rounds of their own artillery landed among them.

The spokesmen also announced that one U.S. soldier was killed Sunday and 14 were wounded when a U.S. plane's bomb went astray during an operation. However, a Claymore mine went off in the same area just before the bomb explosion, and the spokesmen said it might have caused some of the casualties.

Pope Disappointed By Ho's Message

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Vatican expressed sadness today over the message President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam sent to Pope Paul.

A comment in the Vatican daily L'Osservatore Romano said that the replies of U.S. President Johnson and Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam to the Pope's latest peace appeals "do not seem to reject the exhortation from the visible head of the church."

It said Ho's reply, however, "does not unfortunately, contain any new elements to furnish hopes for the start, at least now, of negotiations for an honorable end to the sad conflict."

"The latest developments concerning Vietnam are causes of grave and profound sadness," the paper said.

This was the first formal comment from the Vatican on the answers to Johnson, Thieu and Ho to the Pope's pleas last Wednesday that the Lunar New Year truce be prolonged into negotiations.

The paper said that despite setbacks to the Pope's peace efforts he would not give up trying and that no matter how hard and difficult the way might be to peace the church would not be discouraged.

World Press Critical of U.S.

By REUTERS

World press reaction today generally criticized the United States for its resumption of bombing raids over North Vietnam.

British newspapers described the renewed bombing as a disappointing letdown after the week-long talks in London between the Soviet and British prime ministers.

The mass-circulation Labor Daily Mirror says last-minute Vietnam talks between Harold Wilson and Alexei Kosygin had come within a hair's breadth of success.

But a hoped-for message from Hanoi that North Vietnam would co-operate with peace moves never arrived on the Soviet leader's final day in London, the newspaper says.

The London Times comments: "... Mr. Edward Heath (Opposition leader) got the impression on Sunday that Mr. Kosygin would make sure that the Russian voice counted in Hanoi if the Americans kept off from the bombing."

"Now that prospect is shattered again. The setback is severe and at the moment there can only be a faint hope that Mr. Kosygin and Mr. Wilson, understanding each other more fully, will be better able to seize on another opening when it comes."

The Italian Communist party organ, L'Unita, says the end of the pause demonstrated the U.S. fear of peace.

'Small Move' Needed to Start

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Wilson said today there is in existence a secret plan which could bring peace to Vietnam, but he did not identify the participants in such a plan or give any further details.

Speaking in the House of Commons, Wilson said: "There is an initiative—a plan—which could bring peace tomorrow, which requires a very small move to activate all the complicated machinery that would bring us peace."

He said efforts to get Vietnam peace talks started came close to success during the Vietnamese Lunar New Year truce.

But the conditions needed to bring both sides to the conference table were not created during the truce, he said. He listed particularly a North Vietnamese buildup during the ceasefire, which "threatened to create a severe military imbalance."

Wilson said it also made it harder for the Americans to believe that the North Vietnamese leaders wanted to use the truce for a peace effort "rather than for a further effort in war."

Must Keep Pressing for Solution

The tragic disappointment of these hopes... must not and will not deter us from pressing for a solution," Wilson said.

The British leader was replying to questions on his week-long talks with Soviet Premier Kosygin, which mainly concerned Vietnam.

He said he thought both the Americans and the North Vietnamese genuinely wanted peace, but trust had to be built up.

In their talks with Kosygin, who left for home Monday, Wilson and Foreign Secretary George Brown "made a sustained effort to try to secure conditions during the Vietnamese Lunar New Year truce period which would make possible negotiations for a settlement."

Wilson made his second parliamentary statement on Vietnam in two days. And again he declared: "The road to a solution remains open."

Hanoi-Hawks Foil Kosygin Attempt

An authoritative British official said today that Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin, who tried to stop the war in Vietnam but failed because of a lack of consensus among Hanoi factions.

"The opportunity is gone and we have to look for another," the official said in disclosing some of the secret maneuvering in the final hours of Kosygin's eight-day visit and talks with Prime Minister Wilson.

Publicly, Kosygin sided with the North Vietnam position that the United States must end its bombing of North Vietnam unconditionally and permanently before peace talks could begin.

Privately, he agreed with Wilson to try to obtain some reciprocal concessions from Hanoi to compensate for ending of American bombing. It was this hope that Kosygin could persuade Hanoi to modify its position that brought Wilson to Kosygin's hotel suite in a conference Monday at 1 a.m.

It was during that one-hour conference that Wilson learned that Hanoi would not budge, the official said.

The British government there after sympathized with President Johnson's decision that he could no longer hold back re-

Truce Used
To Aid Troops

WASHINGTON (AP)—The North Vietnamese used 3,777 trucks and vessels to rush at least 25,000 tons of ammunition and equipment toward South Vietnam during the United States bombing pause, the defense department said today.

This was calculated to be enough to support a 10,000-man division in combat for 250 days, a spokesman said.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS MINISTRY IN OTTAWA ASKED BY B.C.

By JOHN MIKA

Legislative Reporter

The provincial government Monday gave a rough outline of its formula for strengthening Confederation, leading with a demand for establishment of a federal ministry of provincial affairs.

The outline came in a carefully-prepared statement to the legislature by Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan who stirred up a controversy a week ago by contending B.C. would be better off financially separated from Canada.

Outside the legislature, he said he was speaking on behalf of the cabinet and Premier Bennett confirmed it.

In his speech, he accused Ottawa of a "pork-barrel approach" to national politics, favoring such provinces as Quebec and ignoring B.C.

He also made it clear he doesn't think British Columbians need to learn to speak French in order to be good Canadians.

Mr. Kiernan indicated his earlier comments were intended to spark a debate on Confederation but he was "disappointed in the resulting debate in this house."

Resuming his economic theme, he said B.C. pays handsomely for its membership in the Canadian nation "in three distinct fields of federal-provincial relations... trade, tariffs and taxation."

"We don't begrudge that but it is a fact of life. We know we need to assist less fortunate or less advanced areas (of Canada)."

Mr. Kiernan argues that in 1961-62 the mark-up represented by tariff protection on B.C. goods sold in other parts of Canada totalled $100 million yet the reverse interval trade had added only $10 million in tariff mark-ups on items B.C. bought from the rest of Canada.

Further, total B.C. sales to other provinces run only about $200 million a year while purchases from the rest of Canada run between $750 and $900 million.

But foreign markets buy almost six times as much B.C. products as does the rest of Canada, he said, pointing out provincial exports run about $1.2 billion annually.

Regarding taxation policies, he said B.C. is one of three provinces that does not receive equalization payments which in the coming year will total about $300 million to Quebec alone.

"It is time all the cards were put on the table because this goes beyond equalization payments. There are project payments too—such as the South Saskatchewan Dam, the Manitoba hydro-electric program and others—which are not calculated in the equalization formula yet come from general funds."

"But we are holding the

5-Year Plan Eyed For Recreation

Program of $2.3 Million To Get Saanich Vote Test

Saanich ratepayers will be asked before the end of the year to vote on a five-year recreation building program for the municipality.

This was disclosed today by Reeve Hugh Curtis following a three-hour closed-door meeting of council Monday night.

"Council agreed to put the recreation program in a capital budget framework over a five-year period with 20-year debt retirement," he said.

"There was no serious disagreement or division over what should go where. The staff is getting some answers, there will be further questioning of the engineering consultants."

He added that "we're looking at the first steps, the most pressing needs, giving due regard to the recreation study."

EXPENDITURES

The reeve said the five-year program will "not necessarily coincide" with what the report recommended for the first five years.

The report recommended expenditure of $4.5 million over 20 years. The first five years would cost $2.3 million and would include:

- Arena, community centre and swimming pool at Tillicum Park;

- Senior citizens' centre, Hampton Park;

- Community centre and swimming pool, McRae estate;

- Extension of Tattersall Drive.

The recreation report, made public last December, said these steps "would provide sufficient indoor recreational facilities to meet recommended standards for the present population of Saanich."

Monday night, council voted 6-3 to close its doors to the public for its first meeting to discuss the report. About 70 persons had turned up for the meeting.

Reeve Curtis recommended "strongly" the meeting be closed, defending Saanich's "pretty solid reputation" for conducting business in the open.

Supporting him were Couns. Harold Todd, Leslie Passmore, William Campbell, Edward Lum and Edith Gunning.

Favoring an open meeting were Couns. Digby Kier, William Noel and Alan Newberry.

"We need now and will need more than ever in the weeks ahead all the public support," said Reeve Curtis.

"I hope no one will believe this will be kept under wraps indefinitely."

Later, he said it is "important to thrash out differences of opinion so we come up with some very definite unanimous ideas of what should be proposed."

"I seek tonight only to avoid controversy. If it moves into the realm of public controversy then the project will fail and our recreation program could be set back two or three years."

Coun. Newberry said he could see "no reason for this being a closed meeting."

PUBLIC MONEY

"The study was undertaken and I see no reason council can't discuss the recreation report in front of the public."

"We are going to discuss how to spend public money. I'm surprised Saanich council considers discussing something of this magnitude in a closed meeting."

Cries of "Why?" were audible from the public as several council members argued in favor of the closed meeting.

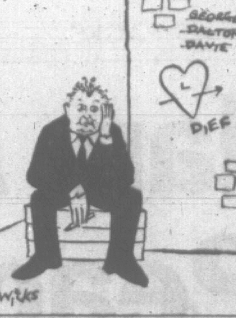

One ratepayer asked what the legal status of a closed meeting is, and was told it is quite legal under the Municipal Act.

Before considering the recreation report, the special council meeting approved the draft letters patent of the Capital Region District to bring the family court under its costs being split by Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

Reeve Curtis recommended "strongly" the meeting be closed, defending Saanich's "pretty solid reputation" for conducting business in the open.

The bombing announcement was "a downright spectacular demonstration of the 'fear of peace' which for several weeks has dominated the ruling American group and is an open challenge to the movement in the public opinion which is fighting for a peaceful solution," the paper says.

The Rome Messagero comments: "It is logical to believe the decision was made following the failure of attempts during the Wilson-Kooyun talks to get nearer to a solution in Vietnam, and also in view of the lack of goodwill shown by Hanoi, which one infers from the tone of the reply from Ho Chi Minh to the Pope."

MILITARY DOMINATES
In Paris, the conservative daily Le Figaro says the end of the pause showed that military strategy rather than diplomatic considerations now dominated U.S. Vietnam policy.

A dispatch from the newspaper's Washington correspondent said the decision had been taken following an editorial in the North Vietnamese Communist newspaper Nhan Dan stating that a bombing pause alone did not correspond to Hanoi's conditions for negotiations, and North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh's Message to Pope Paul.

The correspondent says: "Once again the uncertainties of war and the demands of strategy have won the day over the torments and weaknesses of diplomacy."

The New York Times says in an editorial the United States would be tempted now to escalate the bombing of North Vietnam to destroy the buildup of material during last week's truce.

Bennett Split With Caouette Now Complete

Premier Bennett Monday diplomatically but firmly disassociated himself from Real Caouette's hopes to strengthen the Creditiste Party into a national force.

He made it plain that he will only support Social Credit League candidates.

It completes his disengagement from Mr. Caouette whom he supported for national leader against Robert Thompson and brings him back to full formal support of national leader Thompson, the man he once referred to as "what's his name."

Commenting on a Creditiste announcement that it would field its own national candidates even against Social Credit nominees, Mr. Bennett said:

"The grass roots members of the Social Credit League in each province will select their own candidates, whether federal or provincial, and they will have only one in each riding."

"I will support, in all elections, only the candidates who are chosen under that organization or setup."

HITLER'S PROGRAMS
Mr. Bennett's statement completes his disengagement from Mr. Caouette, the man he praised several years ago as the most vital politician on the Canadian scene. Their estrangement began with Mr. Caouette's praise of certain aspects of Hitler's programs.

WIDE U.S. CONTROL NOTED

Lower Drug Costs Sought in Alberta Brief

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The Alberta government wants the protective walls around the drug industry substantially broken down to bring about effective price competition and lower consumer prices.

Proposals for sweeping changes to Canadian patent, tariff, trade marks and tax laws were placed today before the Commons drug prices inquiry in a bulky economic study by a United States economist.

The study, commissioned by the Alberta government, said the Canadian industry now is almost 90 per cent foreign-controlled and is "well able to cope" with lowering the barriers that squeeze out smaller competitors. Prices would be lowered by 50 per cent with annual savings to consumers of $100,000,000.

The proposed changes "will force existing large firms to respond to the challenge of price competition," says the brief, written by Henry B. Steele, associate professor of economics at the University of Houston. "The major effects of drug reform will be to reduce the prices, selling outlays and profits of existing large drug firms rather than to decrease their share of the market."

His report bristles with comments about excessive promotion, low production costs, cost-increasing rivalry, captive consumers and percentage mark-ups ranging into the thousands.

Prof. Steele also concludes that lack of price competition at the retail level is a major factor in the high cost of drugs. Among the recommendations: —Licenses to permit any qualified drug firm to import finished, semi-finished and bulk patented drugs on payment of reasonable royalties to the patent holder.

—Authority for any government or its agency to use a patented drug on payment of a reasonable royalty.

—Changes in trade marks law to permit importation of trade-marked drugs in competition with the holder of the Canadian trade mark.

—Limitation of tariff to drugs of a kind actually produced in this country plus minimum tariff protection to domestic producers.

—Removal of the federal sales tax on drugs.

—Government-sponsored information to doctors evaluating different drugs.

—Greater price competition in drug retailing.

Prof. Steele says the industry exacts even higher prices than those in the United States where greater patent protection places worldwide limits on price competition.

Eighty per cent of active ingredients are imported in bulk, mainly from the U.S. Processing here into dosage form, is only a minor factor in total cost.

He says the consumer has neither the knowledge nor the opportunity to choose cheaper drugs. The only limits on ability to exploit the consumer are self-restraint and public constraint.

"Public constraint has offered the consumer only an inadequate safeguard," mostly in safety and quality with little attention to price competition to prevent exploitation.

Analysing manufacturers' costs, Prof. Steele concludes that drug firms are deterred from spending much on basic research since "the rate of return which can be made by investing funds in applied research, product development and sale promotion is very high."

ESTIMATE COST

He estimates the cost of applied research at two cents on the sales dollar, a lot less than the industry "would like to have." It consists mostly of building on basic research done outside the industry.

With a premium placed on speed in getting a new drug on the market, the motivation is to limit to a minimum experimental and clinical work, skip stages of development and "apply pressure to the staffs of regulatory agencies in such a way as to facilitate rapid approval."

Prof. Steele suggests that with 80 per cent of active ingredients imported, the import price "may be substantially in excess of actual costs."

Professor Steele said drug firms under present conditions in the industry probably will continue to spend about five times as much on sales promotion as on research.

In addition to bolstering the market appeal of products, excessive promotion also creates a major barrier to entry into the market of smaller firms.

Big promotion budgets are too costly for small firms and, when such firms get a foothold, physicians' confidence in their products may be undermined by their bigger rivals.

He accuses the drug industry of overstating research budgets to justify high prices, adding that efforts to justify prices in terms of quality control "border on the ludicrous."

Turning to marketing, Prof. Steele says the wholesaler operates in a more competitive atmosphere than either the manufacturer or retailer. He gets about 8-13 cents of the prescription dollar.

But with respect to the retail trade, the consumer buying drugs is at an "extreme" disadvantage. The doctor acts, in effect, as purchasing agent but doesn't pay the bill.

Prof. Steele suggests greater dissemination of information, by government if necessary, about drug retail prices, costs of courses of treatment and evaluation of the relative advantages of different kinds of drugs.

He also proposes direct action to institute price competition at the retail level. Lack of such price competition "is a major factor in the high costs of drugs."

The solution, he adds, may take a long time, especially since pharmacy control boards will have to be convinced that it is not ethical to discourage price competition.

Small Firms Target In Sales Attacks

OTTAWA (CP)—An economist says he suspects a major function of the costly sales staffs of the drug industry is to displace the cheaper products of small rival firms.

"This may be one of the major reasons why major drug firms spend about as much on detailmen (travelling salesmen who call on doctors and druggists) as on all other types of sales promotion combined," says a study submitted today to the Commons drug prices inquiry.

The study was commissioned by the Alberta government and undertaken by Henry B. Steele, associate professor of economics at the University of Houston.

Professor Steele says excessive sales promotion budgets of the big manufacturers create a major barrier to entry into the industry by small firms who could provide effective price competition.

Eventually, doctors may learn that the smaller firms which manage to get a foothold have reasonably priced drugs available.

QUERIES PRICES

The doctors may "wonder how it is possible for a tiny firm to undersell a giant by perhaps a 10-to-1 price ratio."

Here the major firm has an advantage. One reason the major firms spend more on travelling salesmen, known as detailmen, who interview doctors and druggists, is that their sales message is verbal not written.

Testimony before Canadian and American inquiries "leads one to suspect that one of the most indispensable functions of detailmen is their ability to displace, with relative impunity, the quality of the products produced by small generic-name (chemical-name) sellers."

Common law and the Trade Marks Act both regard disparagement as unfair competition and prohibit it.

PROMOTION BY FIRMS COSTLY

Doctors Get Bonus in Free Drugs

OTTAWA (CP)—Drug firms subsidize doctors by providing them with sometimes biased and unwanted propaganda about medications, a Commons committee was told today.

Since the availability of these medications profits the doctor, the information should be paid for by the doctor and originate from some other source, says a study of the drug industry submitted to the Commons drug prices inquiry by the Alberta government.

This was one criticism among many in the study, written by Henry B. Steele, associate professor of economics at the University of Houston.

He says drug firms bombard doctors with information and propaganda, most of it unwanted and of "varying degrees of bias and misleading."

The cost of this sales promotion is passed along to the consumer in higher drug prices.

SUBSIDIZE DOCTORS

The physician is subsidized at the cost of the patient. The subsidy is not needed by the doctor, who can pass on his costs of keeping well-informed in his fee charges, and is largely unwanted, the study says.

Mr. Steele also questions whether this subsidy can be justified "since it represents a transfer of income in favor of a high-income group and at the expense of a group whose income is not only on the average lower but whose ability to pay is reduced by precisely the circumstances responsible for seeking medical treatments: At least temporarily impaired earning ability, and increased expenses."

A Dividing Line

THERE IS LITTLE DOUBT, IN the light of the later testimony in the Ottawa hearings, that the heads of the First National City Bank of New York received clear warning that their plan to purchase the Mercantile Bank from its Dutch owners would run counter to pending federal control legislation, and that they received this information before the purchase deal had been closed.

It seems apparent, too, that the Citibank management, acting within the law as it was written, felt confident in going ahead with its plans, in the belief that the Canadian government could not stand up against it. The intervention of the U.S. State Department threw further weight on Ottawa. The possibility of American retaliation, either against the Canadian banking agencies in the United States or against Canadian interests in general, has been freely rumored. It has been used as an argument against displeasing the American giant next to whom we live.

But there is more in this affair than the question of whether Canadian banking offices in the United States may feel restrictive legislation. That could happen regardless of what we do in this country—and, indeed, the proponents of banking legislation now being mooted in Washington claim that it was in prospect long before the Mercantile controversy arose.

There is more involved, too, than the suggestion of general action by the United States to curb Canadian trade, investment or other aspects of our economic life. For if we run this nation with one fearful eye on Washington to catch the first evidence of a frown, then we shall have already abdicated our full sovereignty. We will do better to act as we must and dare the sword of Damocles which some critics envision as hanging over us.

Responsible lawmakers in Washington will respect our sovereignty: they will respect our insistence on the right to order our own affairs legitimately as we see fit. It has been the proud contention of both Canada and the United States over the past decades that it is possible for a free democracy to live and thrive side by side with the United States colossus. It is not a situation devoid of problems; but it is a workable, viable situation. Such economic domination of Canada as has taken place has not been aggressive; rather it has been casual, and welcomed by many Canadians for the material benefits it has brought.

But outright economic or diplomatic moves designed by Washington to force compliance by our national government in any course desired by American interests would be quite another matter. It would expose the United States to the charge of coercion against a smaller neighbor which was also its best customer and ally. Such an eventuality can be no part of United States foreign policy.

Signs of a New Approach

THE SPEECH ON MONDAY BY Mr. U. Alexis Johnson, the recently-appointed United States ambassador to Japan, will be read with care in many world capitals since it contained some comment on the United States attitude toward the upheaval in China which had not been heard before from an American spokesman.

Speaking in Tokyo to a Japanese audience at a meeting of the Asian Affairs Research Council, Mr. Johnson said: "I would hope and expect that those forces in China which want to move from a reliance on outworn shibboleths and doctrines, which have repeatedly demonstrated failure, to dealing with their own internal and external relations in a practical way will ultimately prevail." Clearly expressing encouragement for the anti-Mao faction, Mr. Johnson added: "When their day comes, I can assure you that they will find the United States responsive. Indeed, this is our goal."

Since it is most unlikely that so experienced and careful a career diplomat as Mr. Johnson would publicly express such views without official permission from Washington, it can be taken that the United States is saying in effect that it wishes to encourage the enemies of Chairman Mao and hopes that if they prevail it will be possible for China and the United States to reach an accommodation. Interestingly, too, the ambassador's speech contained an echo of the feelings expressed in London last week by Soviet Premier Kossygin—with Chairman Mao out of the way, both Russia and the United States will be able to do business with China.

Another important departure from America's China policy of nearly 20 years' standing may be seen in Mr. Johnson's statement that, "much as we regret seeing the great Chinese people subjected to harsh and tyrannical rule... it has never been any part of our policy to seek any occasion to use force to overthrow the regime." This coupled with the fact that the ambassador avoided in a reference to the Chinese Nationalist regime on Taiwan the usually standard label, "sole and legitimate government of China," is another indication that the United States is preparing for a revision of its China policy.

A question which must be asked, of course, is what happens to the new approach should Chairman Mao win the factional struggle for control of China? The indirect but unmistakable American — and Soviet — support of his rivals cannot help but infuriate the Maoist group, and it could even be a useful weapon for them in the struggle which is now raging, proof that the opponents of the Cultural Revolution are tools of the imperialist Russians and Americans.

In any event, the gamble which the United States seems to be making by betting on the emergence of anti-Mao forces as the new rulers of China is at least an improvement on the sterile attitude toward China which has been held for too long.

The Heart Appeal

THIS MONTH THE PEOPLE OF Greater Victoria are being asked to contribute at least $25,000 to the current campaign of the Heart Foundation of Canada. For the whole of Vancouver Island the objective is $40,000, for all of British Columbia, $295,000.

The totals, local, Island and provincial, are not high in comparison with many other campaigns. Their achievement is essential, however, to continue the encouraging pace of work that is saving lives from the most lethal disease in Canada.

During February the campaign is concentrating on an appeal for money to expand research. Much remains to be learned about heart disease and the techniques to combat its heavy toll. What has been accomplished in the field is already spectacular. Men, women and children formerly suffering from various forms of heart disease are now living useful lives who, without the knowledge already gained, would not have survived. But the statistics are still distressing. Heart disease claims more victims in Canada than all other diseases put together.

The need is for research. Research is possible only when adequate funds are available. The appeal is pertinent in a country where a quarter of the adults over age 18 are listed as definite or suspected heart cases. A donation could be insurance for the donor, or for someone close to him.

Is That Something for Nothing?

IN the preliminaries to negotiation the sticking point is just what the other side means by insisting that the bombing of North Vietnam must cease before discussions can begin.

On this point Prime Minister Kossygin, who held a news conference in London last Thursday, speaks with great authority. The United States should "immediately and unconditionally cease the bombings of the democratic republic of Vietnam, and then the way would be cleared to the negotiating table for a discussion of all questions of the relations between Vietnam and the United States, in other words, to seek a way to a political solution of the Vietnam problem."

This would be clear enough but for what Secretary Rusk said in his press conference which was held the next day. He stated Hanoi's pre-condition to negotiation is totally different from Mr. Kossygin's.

"The other side," he said, "is demanding an unconditional and permanent cessation of the bombing." The Rusk version of what the adversary demands inflates the demand into an absurdity — an absurdity not only wholly unacceptable to the United States but quite meaningless in fact.

For Secretary Rusk's version makes it appear that the adversary demands that we grant North Vietnam an absolute guarantee that no matter what they do, no matter whom they attack, they will be immune forever from any military action on our part which involves the use of bombers. Mr. Kossygin has not asked us to agree to such nonsense, and it is quite plain from his statement that it is not what he expects of us. What Mr. Kossygin asks us to do is to stop the bombing in order that the way "be cleared to the negotiating table for a discussion of all questions."

Reciprocity

The "reciprocity" which, rightly enough, we ask should be that a ceasefire in the air over North Vietnam will be followed by negotiations for "a political solution of the Vietnam problem." It is obvious that if the negotiation fails and the war is resumed, it would be resumed by the United States as well as by Hanoi.

Had Mr. Rusk paid attention to what Mr. Kossygin said the day before in London, he could not have argued that we are asked to give up something for nothing. As Mr. Rusk spoke there existed already the prediction of the prime minister of the Soviet Union that with the suspension of the bombing "the way would be cleared to the negotiating table." Is that something for nothing? Or is it not precisely what the President most wants to have happen?

The President has been saying since the Baltimore address of April, 1965 that our objective is a political solution in Vietnam which respects the independence of South Vietnam. We have learned during the past week that the Viet Cong which is conducting the rebellion in the south, is not in favor of submission to and absorption by Hanoi. The political aims of the Viet Cong, which have been reported with apparent authority by Wilfred Burchett, are not only quite compatible with our official objectives: if they are agreed to in the settlement and endorsed by Hanoi, by Moscow, and, not inconceivably by Peking, the President will have nothing to complain about. A Different Complaint From U.S. Oil Men

MENTIONING the name of Walter Gordon in the company of American colonists of the oil industry is likely to evoke the same bilious reaction usually reserved for Ho Chi Minh, Martin Luther King or the incumbent Democratic president. Yet the curious fact is this — nobody knows more about or better understands the problem Mr. Gordon seems to be trying to get at than the resident managers of American subsidiaries.

Where Mr. Gordon and the American foreign service people part company is in the means selected to solve the problem. Mr. Gordon is presumably against American domination of Canadian industry and commerce because it inhibits the Canadian economy. He identifies the inhibition with share ownership and places on boards of directors. The Americans understand the inhibition, only they identify it with company policy that is established at the management level, not with share ownership.

Paraphrasing this should be noted: Americans stand in a lot less awe of boards of directors than Mr. Gordon. In many of the biggest American companies, top management is replacing shareholder representatives on boards of directors.

How It Works

Here's how American company policy is likely to work in the service and supply business which does perhaps a quarter billion dollars a year business with the oil and gas industry. The Canadian branches usually function as part of a regional American system. That is the Alberta or Saskatchewan company may be a branch of the Tulsa region, the Los Angeles region or the Houston region.

The manager of the Calgary or Edmonton office may send his "pig-iron peddlers" ranging across all the oil and gas fields of western Canada. When they make sales, the orders go to the Canadian office and thence on to Houston or Tulsa if they cannot be filled from locally made products.

The oil and gas fields hug the international boundary at many places. Thus a salesman covering south eastern Saskatchewan could very easily serve the Williston Basin of North Dakota as well. But the Canadian salesmen can go only to the U.S. border and no farther. They are specifically forbidden to sell anything in Montana or North Dakota. That applies to American made goods as well as Canadian.

The American states are part of a different sales division. If that means servicing them from far away Houston instead of nearby Calgary, that's the way it is. This effectively prevents the sales of Canadian-made oil country goods south of the border, even though it is handled by the American company in Canada.

This applies even to American designed items manufactured in Canada. Thus a Canadian manufacturer of drilling bits, owned 100 per cent by Canadians, can't get into the American market for two reasons. The service companies won't go into the States, and the bits are kept out by patent licensing stipulations.

Tax Avoidance

One of the bugbears of the Canadian government is tax avoidance by American companies by cost allocation. The giant industrial empires manage things so that they make the most profits in the States where the corporation tax is lowest. In this context, Canada is treated as an American state.

If the tax collectors take a bigger bite out of corporate profits in Ontario than in Michigan, costs will be allocated to reduce Canadian profits and increase profits made in Michigan. The American company managers in Canada have lived with this system since the first state corporation tax was imposed.

For some, this can be a ranking grievance, if they work for a company with a profit sharing plan. If the prices charged to one branch are loaded with all kinds of perfectly justifiable cost items, the result will be lower profits. But if the supplying plant is in a high tax area, and the branch is in a low tax area, these charges may be dropped.

In the $250,000,000 natural gas processing business, the owners of this huge investment have arranged matters so no corporate taxes are paid at all. The processing plants are set up as co-operative facilities by the owners of the gas fields. They are not permitted to make charges that will result in a profit being made.

Canadian branches are frequently required to follow policy manuals supplied from the United States which often stipulates the exact material and equipment that is to be used — down to typewriters, the body face on printed forms and the wording of inter-office communications.

All these are management decisions and management directives. Many of them affect only small matters. But some whopping inhibitions can afflict Canadian business from the whim decisions of foreign management.

An example was the take-over of a pioneer Canadian oil company by California interests five years ago. This company had a customer relationship with a Canadian service and supply company that went back to the pre-war oil boom in Turner Valley. The relationship was ended by a ukase from California instructing management to make all its purchases in future through an American supply company.

These are the sort of inhibitions on the Canadian economy the Americans know all about — restrictions on markets, on profitability, on free choice of supply. They would understand what Mr. Gordon was up to if he was mounting a crusade in any of these directions. But they don't see how ownership of share interest has any relevancy to the problem which they regard as being strictly one of internal management.

Spending and Pensioners

Those citizens who approve of our present Ottawa government, and those who rejoice about the Centennial Year, and dumping of public money into far-distant Montreal should try to pressure those $18,000 MPs to remember the low pensions paid to ex-federal civil servants and their widows. The cost of living is considerably higher in the West than in the East.—H. Peters, 812 Newport.

Ombudsman

Recently, when I saw in the local paper that three ladies had been appointed to the legislature, for some purpose or other, I secretly wished that we had some good responsible citizen appointed as an "Ombudsman" to whom we could take any troubles for adjustment.

I can vouch for the need of such a person, for people, with little or no education and those from other countries unfamiliar with our currency or weights and measures. They need, to be protected, I assure you.

Would the Silver Threads support me in this undertaking? — Harry Wier.

School Names

If it is School Board No. 61 policy to name schools after the street on which they are situated, why is the new Northridge Elementary not called Carey Road School and Hampton School not called Regina Avenue School?

If policy can be disregarded in these two instances surely Tuone Elementary is not too much to ask? — "Interested."

Solution

If the United States was right in going to the aid of South Vietnam, in their fight against communism, it must be right for them to continue bombing until that aim is achieved. If the North Vietnamese want the bombing to stop, all they have to do is withdraw their troops from South Vietnam, and advise the Viet Cong to go back home, and say by referendum, if they want communism in South Vietnam or not. If the popular vote there is for Communism, then the United States should pull out at once and leave them alone.—E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful Street.

Remembering

Twenty-five years ago, on Feb. 15, Malaya was surrendered to the Imperial Japanese forces. Few Canadians were involved in the preoccupation or post-occupation chaos.

The writer personally has two cogent reasons to recall the day. Firstly he had participated, and secondly, many of his friends will remain one with the Malayan earth for all time as a result of their participation.

It is the expressed thought of one friend (given on the day he took his ship out of the Java Sea and did not return) that is most appropriate for this anniversary.

He said that he considered it a waste to set up memorials to those who died by war, for they merely glorified war by association and perpetuated its folly. It would in his opinion, be much more profitable to expend wealth and energy on enlightening those who, despite experience or for the lack of it, remain unconvinced of the waste and insanity of slaughter in the name of passing "causes."

Should there still be in this country, a few others who have reason to recall Feb. 15, 1942, it is to be hoped that they will "stand on guard" and pour their energies into resisting any move toward involving Canada in the present folly in Asia. — Eugene M. Johnson, 2229 Arbutus.

Enjoyable Amateurs

In view of the devastating criticism of the Naden Amateur Concert Society's performance of the "Pirates of Penzance," in the Times, I would like to offer unreserved applause to the principals and cast, the directors and the orchestra and everyone concerned for an evening of excellent entertainment, which was obviously enjoyed by the crowd attending on Friday night.

I do not think it helps the theatre in Victoria to write about it as though we are already a sophisticated audience.

The critique ended up with pure acid. Not only was the company's performance rated as amateur, but it was inferred that to be amateur was to be indifferent which gives little encouragement to Victorians to take an interest in amateur theatricals. — John G. Barnett, 3141 Woodburn Ave.

Looking Back

From The Times of Feb. 14, 1967.

LONDON — The famine in Russia will reach an acute stage from now on and the probability that Russia will cease to be an exporter of wheat during the present and next crop years has directed renewed attention to the Canadian Northwest as a factor in supplying the Russian deficiency. The question is whether the United States and Canada can, during the remainder of this year and the coming one, supply it. The outlook for the Canadian Northwest farmers under these circumstances is the most promising for years.

WILL GENETICISTS DETERMINE MAKE-UP OF THE HUMAN RACE?

By GERALD GRANT

ATLANTIC CITY — Within 30 years, engaged couples "very likely" will go to "genetic clinics" for a battery of tests to determine whether they have any hereditary defects, a famous biologist said here.

If one or both are carriers of defective genes, they can be "advised not to marry or at least not to have children," said H. Bentley Glass, vice-president and professor of the State University of New York.

In cases where parents would produce a child without limbs or some other "grave defect" such as idiocy, Glass argued that "avoidance of parenthood ought to be mandatory."

Genetic clinics will be part of a new world of controlled reproduction, genetic surgery and banks of frozen sex cells that could be used to produce human embryos in the laboratory.

Reality by 2000

Glass, a former Johns Hopkins University professor who has been an officer or director of nearly a dozen leading scientific societies, predicts that much of this new world will be a reality by the year 2000.

He spoke to an audience of school superintendents at the annual meeting of the American Association of School Administrators, which has drawn more than 23,000 educators. His talk was "What Man Can Be."

Glass said that perhaps "the most remarkable achievement of scientific man in the 20th century" has been to learn the secret of how human genes transmit hereditary characteristics from one generation to the next. But he asserted that unlocking the genetic code had opened up "frightening possibilities" of the "control of human behavior by the year 2000."

Kind of Man

"For the problem that faces us," he went on, "is not so much the problem of how to change man's nature as the problem of the kind of human being we wish to populate the earth. Should we breed for uniform superiority of physique, of health, of intellect? Or should we breed for maintenance of human diversity?"

He said it would be feasible by the year 2000 to "bank" human reproductive cells of both sexes in a frozen state, as is now common with the sperm of sheep and cattle.

This would make it possible to have "marriages" across generations. If such techniques had been available in Shakespeare's time, for instance, his frozen cells could conceivably be mated with those of Marjorie Anderson.

Such techniques would enable couples to have "prenatal adoptions," Glass explained. That is, an embryo made in a test tube could be implanted in the womb of a mother unable to have her own child. This would engender "maternal and paternal feelings more fully" than adoption of a child already several months or years old, Glass suggested.

Birth Permits

Eugenics might also be related to population control. In order to limit population Glass believes that by the year 2000 married couples may be given two coupons with their marriage certificates, allowing them to have only two children. There would be penalties, such as restrictive tax measures, or perhaps temporary sterilization, for couples who had more.

It might be desirable for some couples to have more than two children. But they would have to be genetically certified to have more. Glass said one of the simplest tests might be to examine their first two children to make sure they were not physically or mentally "below average."

The day is not too distant, Glass went on, when scientists will be able to perform genetic surgery by probing human embryos and sex cells to transform a defective gene and make it functional again.

New Tests

He said that tests were now being developed to enable laboratory specialists to determine whether an individual carries even a single dose of a particular defective gene.

New genetic knowledge could be turned to many uses, Glass observed. For instance, he said that American Negroes are now about 30 per cent "white" as far as the makeup of their genes is concerned. At present rates of intermarriage, it would take nearly 2000 years "before an eventual equilibrium is reached and individual genetic differences are no longer noticeably racial."

By "controlled reproduction," the "rate of intermixture" could be speeded up considerably, Glass declared. But he wondered "what would be the social consequences?" Glass also asked the school administrators to ponder what might be the effects on the family and society of "the complete liberation of the sexual life from its relationship to reproduction."

India's Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi is dwarfed by picture of her father, the late Jawaharlal Nehru, as she stands at the microphone in Marathashtra State. Mrs. Gandhi has been campaigning extensively for the crucial week-long national elections which begin tomorrow.

Indian Democracy Faces Stern Test This Week

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

This week Indians go to the polls — at a troubled time for their country. Since the last election they have experienced two wars, the deaths of two prime ministers, the collapse of many of the hopes of economic progress raised by the third five-year plan, a devaluation, and two winters of hunger, bordering in some areas on famine.

And in the past year: "Unruly behavior of some members in our legislatures; factions, caste disputes, and political rivalries that have disrupted many a state; fasts unto death and even threats of self-immolation; riots and sabotage... have raised in many minds doubts about the stability of a united, democratic India."

That was President Radhakrishnan in a magnificent Republic Day broadcast to the nation. Some people even predict that this month's elections will be the last.

There is not necessarily any comfort in the fact that many of these tribulations have long been foreseen. Economic planners in the late fifties based some of their calculations on the expectation of a "time of troubles" after Mr. Nehru's death; they hoped by then to have laid sufficiently firm economic foundations to absorb the shocks resulting from political instability. But the task was greater than they thought.

For one reason, they were caught up in the race between food resources and rising population (another crisis that everybody is always predicting); for a second reason, the wars led to a weight of military expenditure that would be burdensome to much and decision-taking are perfectly conceivable in other ways, as caste also changes in reapportionment.

Mr. Nehru was right to foresee that the greatest danger to Indian democracy and unity was a resurgence of Hindu communalism, if only because so many million Indians are not Hindus. Indeed, whether Indian democracy survives probably depends above all on how resolutely its leaders (of all parties) can stand up to the fanatics.

Still Time

But within the framework of a secular state, there is still time for Indians to make something completely native out of parliamentary institutions and the party system, as they have successfully Indianized so much else. But they will not be able to do so unless they can break through their poverty, and that does not depend on them alone.

The pipeline of food grains to India will not run dry during these hungry months. Last week President Johnson announced an immediate allocation of two million tons from United States stocks, to add to the 2,300,000 tons which he said were already on the way from Canada, Australia, the Soviet Union, and the U.S.

Agreed to Terms

Mrs. Gandhi last month told her electorate that the Indian government had agreed to the terms demanded by the U.S. Food for Peace Act of 1966: that India would not trade in strategic goods with Cuba or in any goods with North Vietnam.

These conditions were insisted on by the U.S. Congress in spite of opposition by the administration. Mrs. Gandhi said that they did not affect the national honor since India was not doing those things in any case.

This is a matter for the judgment of the two countries concerned, one of which desperately needs the additional food and the other of which has taken up the main task of supplying it. It is hardly for bystanders to offer advice.

richer countries; for a third the international economic climate grew chillier.

So in India the economic and the political instability coincided after all, each aggravating the other. Other newly independent or resurgent countries are going through corresponding crises of adaptation; one has led to the slaughter of hundreds of thousands of Indonesians.

But should Indians therefore despair of democracy? Certainly its forms are bound to change; they were evolved in Western Europe in quite other conditions. Even in Western Europe no party can remain in power for 30 years (as Congress has) without degenerating.

Efforts to Adapt

But some of the signs looked upon as evidence of the breakdown of democracy may in reality be painful efforts to adapt it to the complexities of Indian society. Thus the devolution of power from the central to the state governments is not necessarily disruptive of national unity but may be essential to it.

Political Paralysis In Latin America

The Washington Post

LIMA, Peru — When Chilean President Eduardo Frei Montalva's senate opposition teamed up recently to scuttle his visit to the United States, it demonstrated anew the debilitating sickness afflicting parliamentary democracy in most parts of Latin America.

In the view of virtually all impartial observers, the senate's action had no purpose other than a cynical and almost irrationally partisan desire to humiliate Frei. Moreover, it was carried out with a total disregard for the consequences to Chile's domestic and foreign policy problems.

Unfortunately, this incident was neither isolated nor especially peculiar to Chile. Although outwardly more dramatic than most, it was a piece with the sort of thing that happens almost daily in parliaments throughout Latin America.

For while many Latin countries face genuinely free elections and multi-party systems, most of the legislators have no idea of what is implied by such terms as "parliamentary responsibility" and "loyal opposition." This, in the long run, is an even more serious threat to the area's progress than the periodic displacement of democratic processes by dictatorships.

Indeed, it frequently has been one of the principal contributory causes of dictatorship.

Main Reason For Takeover

In the two most important Latin coups of recent years — those in Brazil in 1964 and in Argentina last year — the political paralysis caused by congressional partisanship and irresponsibility was cited as one of the main justifications for military takeovers.

Today, congressional democracy in both countries has been replaced by other methods (in Brazil by purges and rigged elections that guarantee the government a docile congressional majority, and in Argentina by the simple abolition of congress). And when the Brazilian and Argentine regimes are criticized as regressive, their supporters frequently reply by pointing to the political anarchy in other Latin countries that have free parliaments.

The roots of the problem go back to the 19th century, when Latin political parties were little more than the personal vehicles of generals or regional caudillos bent on advancing their own power at all costs. Today, although the tradition of caudilloism is fast dying out, its attendant attitudes of blind partisanship and "anything goes" in attacking the opposition are still very much alive.

The way that this works was vividly demonstrated by what happened in Chile. There, the various opposition groups, which collectively outnumber Frei's Christian Democratic party in the senate, took advantage of an ancient constitutional provision that the president cannot leave the country without the permission of congress.

Rationalizations Patently Cynical

In voting to deny this permission, the opposition parties were unable to offer a single reason why Frei's presence was required in Chile. And, although a couple of them tried to justify their action on ideological grounds, their rationalizations were so patently cynical as to leave no doubt that their sole purpose was to damage Frei's reputation.

The hypocrisy inherent in the National Party's position has ample parallels both in the other Chilean parties and in the opposition groups of other countries.

Here in Peru, for example, President Fernando Belaunde Terry's chief opposition is the country's largest political party, the Popular American Revolutionary Alliance (APRA).

Although the APRA's left-of-center, populist position is basically in accord with many of Belaunde's reform programs, the party has chosen for its congressional coalition partner not Belaunde's Popular Action Party but the right-wing National Union of former dictator Manuel Odría.

Union Grounded On Hatred, Jealousy

Before Belaunde's 1963 election, these two groups were such ideological blood enemies that much of Odría's energies during his dictatorship were given over to persecution of the Apristas. Their present union is so grounded in jealousy and hatred of Belaunde that many commentators have likened it to a Latin American version of the 1939 Hitler-Stalin pact.

Since Peru's president and congress are elected at the same time and serve terms of identical length, Belaunde is saddled for his entire presidency with a hostile congressional majority bent on torpedoing most of his programs for partisan reasons.

Next door in Colombia, the story is very similar. There, intense partisan rivalry between the dominant Liberal and Conservative parties has caused almost a century of sporadic civil war and bloody backslaps violence.

Though the two groups are now joined in a grand coalition, extremist factions from both the Liberals and Conservatives have split off from their main parties to conduct a crippling policy of blind opposition in congress to the programs of President Carlos Lleras Restrepo.

It is also an open secret in Colombia that some of these dissident groups provide the chief financial and moral assistance to the guerrilla bands that continue to keep violence alive in the rural areas.

A like tale of obstructionism, narrow partisanship and rule-or-ruin jealousies attaches to almost every other freely elected congress in the area. Perhaps the only notable exception is Venezuela, where President Raul Leoni's main congressional opposition is the Venezuelan Christian Democratic Party, known as COPEI.

Votes in Accord With Programs

No one, least of all Leoni, would call COPEI a rubber stamp, for it has opposed the government frequently and fiercely. Invariably, however, its negative votes have been firmly in accord with established party programs and doctrines.

In fact, COPEI has joined with Leoni's Democratic Action Party to put across important progressive legislation — a fact that makes Leoni probably the only president in Latin America to enjoy a "loyal opposition" in the true meaning of the term. Unfortunately, the indications are that instead of COPEI serving as an example for other Latin parliaments, the influences are working in the opposite direction.

Party leader Rafael Caldera is known to have come under increasingly tense pressure from within his own party to be more traditionally Latin in opposing the government. And most observers think that if he is ever deposed from COPEI's leadership it will be by those who want to follow the example of opposition parties in the rest of Latin America.

Union Leaders Clinging To a Curtain of Cliches

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

(Mr. Crowe is associate professor of history at Alkison College, York University. Mr. Fisher, a former NDP MP, lectures in Canadian government at Carleton University.)

If one labor spokesman says that labor can "close down" Newfoundland, then that of course is the labor headline for the day. It probably would be given prominence anyway, but labor in Canada is such an unknown world that news-men grab on to something which they can understand. They can understand "closing down" a province.

At the Rand Royal Commission on Labor Disputes one union official gave his implied sanction to picket line violence, one characterized Justice Rand as being a "capitalist" and one condemned the commission as "a forum for anti-union propaganda." More disturbing than these revealing, harmful and wholly unrepresentative gaffes was the failure of responsible union representatives who testified before the commission to break away from the sterile clichés of traditional labor policy. There was a total lack of fresh thinking, of new ideas for solving the pressing problems of modern society.

It must be acknowledged that the brief of the Ontario Federation of Labor was a technically competent production and that no fault can be found in its presentation to the commission. But at the beginning of the hearings Mr. Justice Rand stated: "We want an interchange of views, a frank expression in which we can tear the clothes off ideas and see them in their nakedness."

Unfortunately such an attitude is foreign to Canadian labor leaders. Far from encouraging free and open discussion of ideas within the movement, they do all they can to stifle it. Expressions of original viewpoints are either ridiculed or disdainfully ignored. The few mavericks who speak out in defiance of the unspoken ban on internal dialogue are ostracized and labelled as subversives or troublemakers.

The result is that there is little critical examination of basic labor policies and methods between conventions. The Commission on Constitution and Structure of the Canadian Labor Congress, which is now conducting hearings, is composed entirely of top labor leaders who insist on holding sessions in camera and who refused to make public the contents of the briefs submitted to them. They know that to do so would spark the kind of debate within the movement that they are determined to suppress.

Inevitably, this refusal to engage in a continuing examination and review of their policies leaves union officials ill-equipped to appear before any impartial outside inquiry into labor problems. Since they never pose to themselves the kind of searching questions fired at them by Mr. Justice Rand, they are caught completely off-guard.

They have to fall back on the stereotyped platitudes about labor's rights that they have been repeating for 30 years or more. Either that, or they have to resort to evasiveness or to resentful aspersions against the questioner.

Because a labor policy is 30 years old it is not necessarily obsolete. On the contrary, its longevity would seem to indicate that it is probably valid and worth preserving. What is objectionable is the enshrinement of these rights as sacred and unchangeable and unquestionable.

If they are valid they will survive inquiry. But if they are treated as dogma then the presumption of society increasingly will be that they are invalid.

Mr. Justice Rand's questioning of sacrosanct tenets of labor's credo was designed to shake union representatives out of their doctrinaire amnesia. This provocative technique failed. Although he warned them not to interpret his queries as a reflection of conclusions already reached, most labor spokesmen have put such a construction on them. They are indignant that cherished beliefs should be challenged. Instead of stimulating a mutually helpful self-analysis, the commissioner incited a ritualistic recital of an ancient catechism.

This was entirely predictable. Labor leaders just do not know what self-examination means. They have never permitted within the labor movement — apart from conventions — the free exchange of opinions about the merits of basic practices and attitudes that is now commonplace in most other sections of society.

And even at conventions labor leaders are uncomfortable and unhappy in an atmosphere of truly free speech, and have a sigh of relief when they can adjourn and go to sleep for another two years.

Mr. Justice Rand, by his trenchant interrogation of labor spokesmen, exposed their unwillingness to examine basic precepts with an open mind, their reliance on dusty shibboleths, their poverty of new ideas. It is the devotion of power from the central to the state governments is not necessarily disruptive of national unity but may be essential to it.

This is the sorry fate that is inexorably overtaking the Canadian labor movement as it clings to a conspiratorial methodology of a bygone era.

IMPORT BILL IN BRITAIN SETS RECORD

LONDON (Reuters)—A record import bill checked Britain's overseas trading progress in January and produced a $9,000,000 ($27,000,000) loss at the end of the month, the government announced today.

The recent upward trend in exports continued — overseas sales were $490,000,000 against $441,000,000 in December.

But the benefit was skimmed off by a mounting import bill of $554,000,000 against $507,000,000 in December.

The rise was believed to be partly due to shipment of goods held back until they were no longer liable to the emergency surcharge of 10 per cent, which was lifted Nov. 10.

Automation Agreement For Oil Men

VANCOUVER (CP)—An automation agreement, believed the first in the Canadian petroleum industry, was signed Monday in British Columbia and is expected to set a pattern for all industry.

The federal government, university, management and labor officials worked 16 months to produce the four-point program signed by the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union and Imperial Oil Ltd.

The agreement deals with worker displacement by automation by separating the workers into age groups.

Workers between 57 and 65 may take an early retirement at a better-than-normal retirement pension. If automation takes their jobs, they will retain their regular wage until a new rate is negotiated for their new position.

RETAIN LEVELS

Those between 46 and 57 may retain their wage levels in the same way until they get a higher paid job through training or until they retire. They are not required to have the formal education qualifications normally necessary for in-plant transfer.

The age group from 35 to 46 will retain its wage levels for a period equivalent to one week for each year of employment or during a period of retraining for a higher-paid job in the plant.

Workers not in those three categories are protected by clauses in the general contract, calling for six months notice of automation or job changes, severance pay and security of position based on seniority.

BUSINESS VIEWS

California Market Eyed

By AB KENT
Business Editor

A wistful look at one of the world's greatest consumer markets is cast in the latest in a series of market reports by the B.C. government.

The study released Monday is of the state of California and is made by the bureau of economics and statistics for the department of industrial development and commerce.

Following closely a 1966 study dealing with Washington and Oregon, the California study is of manufactured goods and raw products imported to California in 1964.

Although the figures are now two years old, presumably they are the latest available.

Specifically, the report aims to show B.C. businessmen what types of goods are being imported to California, along with their value and point of origin.

It is the department's intention to encourage B.C. industry to participate fully in trade on the Pacific rim, of which this province is considered to be a vital part.

The report notes that a lowering of trade barriers between the U.S. and Canada should do much to stimulate greater movement of goods across the border.

And also, the report says, B.C. industry is becoming more efficient and therefore more able to compete in what is not only a large but sophisticated California market.

Although competition is very keen, it is suggested the sheer volume imported by California leaves room for some increase in B.C. participation.

Closeness of B.C. to California, cheap rail, road, air and sea transportation, and a common language should also enhance the attraction of B.C. goods as compared with overseas countries, the report says.

Statistics show that in 1964 goods imported to California and considered worthy of investigation by businessmen here were valued at $764 million.

The list included, for instance, whiskey, pig iron, pleasure boats, sausage skins, candy and confectionery, sports clothing and equipment, ceramic tiles, canned beef, and hardware.

Figures showing the centres of highest population, employment and payroll are given, along with such other information as industrial structure and personal incomes.

An interesting comparison is given: per capita income in B.C. in 1964 was $2,087 (Can.).

In California $3,103 (U.S.). The rate of per capita income growth in California between 1950 and 1964 was from 3.3 per cent to 4.6 per cent.

Major sources of income in the Golden State were manufacturing wages, government salaries, property income, wholesale and retail trade, proprietors income and income from service industries. Large defence installations and the aerospace industry accounts for much of the payrolls.

Water, one of the fundamental resources, will be the subject of the 17th B.C. Natural Resources Conference to be held Feb. 22-24 at the Empress Hotel.

Ray Williston, minister of lands, forests, and water resources, will be keynote speaker. Federal minister without portfolio John Turner will be guest speaker.

To be dealt with at the conference will be the use and misuse of our water supplies, pollution, and problems at the provincial, federal and international level.

A cautious look into the future of the Canadian petroleum industry by an American research firm clashes with the optimism concurrent with spectacular reserves being uncovered in the Rainbow-Zama Lakes region of northwestern Alberta and reaching into north-eastern B.C.

The problem lies with developing markets for petroleum products at profitable return, the W. J. Levy Inc., survey says.

It is suggested by some segments of the oil industry that the Levy estimate of market growth requirement of 50,000 barrels of crude oil daily is a conservative figure.

Even greater growth will be needed just to maintain the status quo, it is said.

The transportation facilities will have to be developed in a way that will make them flexible enough to serve both domestic and U.S. markets.

And the time is short if Canadian pipeline utilities are going to take advantage of the vast Chicago-Detroit and Ottawa-east markets.

A new U.S. line to carry Louisiana crude to the Lake Michigan area will be operating by 1973.

Pessimism is expressed in dealing with Puget Sound refineries, which it is estimated will likely cut imports by 25 per cent by 1970, with a five-year lapse until current requirements are met again.

Sharp Drop In Earnings

NEW YORK (AP)—Chrysler Corp. has told shareholders that earnings dropped sharply in 1966 despite an increase in sales.

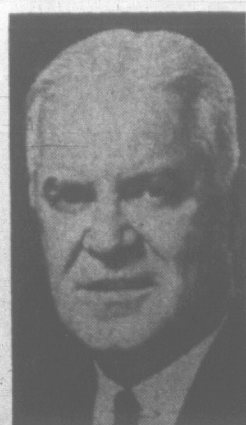

The No. 3 auto-maker in the U.S. earned $189,200,000, of $4.16 a share, compared with $233,400,000, or $5.44 a share, in 1965.

Sales rose to $5,600,000 from $5,300,000.

In the fourth quarter, earnings totalled $65,800,000, or $1.44 a share, against $97,000,000, or $2.14 a share, a year earlier.

Chairman Lynn Townsend and president V. E. Boyd advised stockholders that the decrease in earnings was due to higher costs of labor and materials.

These increases were not fully recovered in the pricing of 1967 models, they said.

TO KEEP PACE with expanding needs about 170,000 housing units must be built in Canada this year, says Labor Minister Kiernan.

He admitted there had been a severe setback in 1966, when economic conditions forced investors to look elsewhere for better returns and "housing was virtually priced out of the market." He said Ottawa is ready to take whatever steps are necessary to alleviate the present shortage.

Pine Point Reports Jump in Earnings

MONTREAL (CP) Pine Point Mines Ltd. has announced net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31, 1966 of $34,200,000 or $7.57 a share compared with $22,100,000 or $5.55 a share in 1965.

The company said the figures are subject to audit and that the annual report will be published in the latter part of March.

KIERNAN TELLS HOUSE

Peace Shutdown Averted by Gov't

By JOHN MIKA

The B.C. government funneled pension funds away from school and municipal bonds to B.C. Hydro in order to stave off a disastrous shutdown of the Peace River power project, Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan told the legislature Monday.

It was the government's first response to Opposition Leader Robert Strachan's analysis last week that the government raised its Hydro bond holdings 576 per cent while boosting the school and municipal holdings only .9 per cent between 1962 and 1966.

Mr. Kiernan said the opposition neglected to mention that investment capital sources throughout the Western world "went sour" last fall.

"If we had stopped the Peace it would have piled up costs at a fantastic rate and there would have been very serious implications for the public," he said.

"It would be absurd to allow a project this large to stop (while waiting for lower interest rates) and that is why we negotiated a no-strike agreement with the union council on these projects."

"When the money market was at its worst about last November the premier asked that any project that could be delayed, be delayed. Now the capital climate is easing."

Mr. Kiernan defended the delays that were enforced by the government. "While I agree that school shifts are an inconvenience to both the children and the parents, no serious lasting economic damage has been done to the children or the parents," he said.

He added it was "unfair" to call a $52 million school construction program last year "a squeeze."

"We are not unmindful that there is anxiety and inconvenience to people waiting for elective surgery but I have not heard of a single instance where a person with an acute case could not obtain treatment."

Mr. Kiernan said there was no suggestion from the opposition that purchasing the B.C. Hydro bonds was a bad investment for the pension funds or that they were illegal.

He said the Liberals severely criticized the government for going to Wall Street to borrow money "yet they opposed the Bank of B.C. for three years."

He also defended the government's $75.8 million budgetary reserve (as of a year ago) yet this represented only about 10 per cent of the new budget and less than 4 per cent of the $1.6 billion contingent liability debt guaranteed by the province.

Yet opposition and other critics constantly demanded that the government spend the budgetary reserve for this or that purpose at the same time they agree a budgetary reserve is needed to back the contingent liabilities that all approve as necessary.

He pointed out that there was general approval of the establishment of a hospital construction financing authority which would only increase the contingent liability account.

"Is it unreasonable to ask that you accept the need for the guarantor to be able, and to demonstrate that he is able at all times to carry out his commitment as guarantor? If this is not so, the guarantee is only a play on words."

"We must have the budgetary reserve in order that we make sure the government is solvent at all times."

"That provincial guarantee is only as good and solid as it is today while the guarantor carries that very solvent position."

Speed Skater McCannell Racks Up Fourth Victory

QUEBEC (CP) — Alberta and Manitoba, led for two days by hard-charging speed skaters, are fighting for the lead in the first Canadian Winter Games.

With 45 gold, silver and bronze medals decided so far, Alberta holds a slim one-point lead over Manitoba in the points standings.

Doreen McCannell, 19-year-old University of Manitoba physical education student, swept four gold medals in four events to take early individual honors in the games, which end here Feb. 19.

Alberta stayed close with veteran Paul Enoch turning in a triple gold medal performance, missing a medal in only one of the four events he tried.

Based on three points for a first-place gold, two for a second-place silver and one for a bronze, the provinces lined up this way:

NARROW MARGIN

Alberta 24 points; Manitoba 23; Ontario and Quebec 18; Saskatchewan 4; and British Columbia 3.

Injuries continued to plague the games.

In first-day action, four basketball players suffered leg injuries and Glenn Sebastien, Saskatoon gymnast, was taken to hospital for an emergency appendectomy.

A basketball referee was knocked unconscious during the course of his duties.

HOCKEY PLAYERS HURT

Joe Cheverie and Wayne McDougall, hockey players for St. Dunstan's University at Charlottetown, were hurt in action Monday.

Synchronized swimming ended Monday with Quebec's Susan Bouchard and Marilyn Malenfant winning a gold medal for their province in pairs competition.

Karen Gilling and Cindy Stevens of British Columbia swam to the pairs silver medal ahead of Michele Verreault and Louise Bedard of Quebec.

In team swimming, the gold medal went to Quebec. Ontario won the second-place silver and Alberta the bronze.

Gymnastics continue for one more day, but 12 medals were handed out in the sport Monday.

In men's team gymnastics, Ontario won the gold, Quebec the silver and B.C. the bronze. In the women's section, it was Ontario, Saskatchewan and Quebec.

In individual gymnastics, the all-around male was Stephen Mitruk of Ontario. Michel Jodoin of Quebec was second and Brian McVey of Ontario third.

BADMINTON OUR BEST

Teresa McDonald of Ontario won the gold medal as top female gymnast, followed by Jennifer Diachun of Ontario and Barbara Thompson of Ontario.

Here's how B.C. teams and athletes fared:

Shooting: Jim Lee, gold medalist for Canada in the British Empire Games in Jamaica last year, was third in the .22-calibre round competition.

Badminton: B.C. is one of four provinces with perfect records going into the fifth round, having defeated the NWT and New Brunswick.

Hockey: B.C. defeated New Brunswick 8-0.

Curling: B.C.'s record is 0-2. The west coast team lost its third-round match 8-7 to Saskatchewan.

Basketball: B.C. won its men's game 80-68 over Nova Scotia; B.C. ladies bounced Nova Scotia 65-43.

Gymnastics: B.C. picked up a third-place (bronze) medal in the men's competition.

Table Tennis: B.C. lost 12-1 to Quebec, virtually assuring the winners of top honors. B.C. and Ontario, each with only one defeat, meet today in matches that should decide the silver and bronze winners.

Turcotte Set Down After Hialeah Spill

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Canadian hockey Ron Turcotte was suspended for 10 days by Hialeah officials Monday in the wake of a three-horse spill in Saturday's Boushville Handicap.

Turcotte, from Grand Falls, N.B., was judged guilty of permitting Point du Jour to drift out at the eighth pole "causing serious interference."

Trotters Offer Lou Cool Million

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —

The Harlem Globe Trotters, who once lured Wilt Chamberlain away from Kansas University after his junior year, are hot on the trail today of UCLA's fabulous sophomore giant Lew Alcindor.

Alcindor hinted Sunday that the touring Globe Trotters had offered him a contract if he would drop out of school and join them.

But the 7-foot-1½" lad from New York appeared cool to the wealthy offer, reportedly for $1,000,000.

"Right now I'm interested in my education," the centre of the No. 1 ranked Bruins said. "But it's possible something could come up in the future."

Owner Jerry Saperstein of the Globe Trotters was reported to have said in Wichita, that he was willing to make such a rich offer to Alcindor in a $1,000,000 contract basis which would be renewable every five years.

Big Lew said he had been approached several times in the past by the famous basketball clowns, but added, "nothing came of it."

Coach John Wooden of UCLA, when queried on the possibility of losing his high-scoring superstar, stressed he would not try to influence Alcindor in any decision.

"If the Globe Trotters were to offer him a legitimate million dollars, with no loopholes, who's to say he might not take it?" Wooden commented.

"I could not in good faith and conscience influence any boy either way in something like that. Suppose I advised him the wrong way. Then I'd feel badly. It's a decision that is up to the boy."

Alcindor's rumored offer is a parallel to the case of Chamberlain, who left Kansas with a year of eligibility remaining to join the Globe Trotters. He later switched to the National Basketball Association.

The NBA has made it a policy not to sign a college player until his original class has graduated. The new American Basketball Association apparently is following the same ground rules.

Wooden indicated also he scented the possibilities of a publicity stunt in Saperstein's rumored offer which the coach said as far as he knows had not yet been made.

"You'd think they would go to the boy first and make the offer before saying they were going to do it," Wooden added.

Mary Convinces Goalie He IS England's Worst

"Am I the worst soccer goalie in England?" mused Ted Bishop at Slough, England, after he had allowed 73 goals in his team's first eight games this season.

After Sunday's match he had his answer.

"There has never been a more hopeless goalie than me," he muttered.

Bishop gave up seven goals and his team again took it on the chin.

"It's a nice chap, but he's not a soccer player," that came from an opposing player who booted four shots past Bishop Sunday.

The player's name is Mary Westcott. She is 16 and the star of her all-girls team.

Canada has eliminated Mexico from Thomas Cup badminton competition and will meet the winner of the United States-Jamaica match — expected to be the U.S. — in a second-round clash that may be held in Calgary.

Canada finished a two-day contest with Mexico Sunday at Mexico City by taking five matches and a sweeping the series 9-0.

Wayne Macdonnell, the Canadian champion from Vancouver, picked up the fifth point required for a Canadian triumph by winning Sunday's first match, defeating Antonio Rangel 12-15, 15-6, 15-8.

Completing the team, which got Canada past the first round for the second time in 19 years, were Bruce Rollick, Ed Peterson and Matt Faberson of Vancouver; Jim Cammish, Woodstock, Ont., and Jamie Paulson, Calgary.

Elsewhere in the wonderful world of sports:

Fred Glover, 39, has become the third player to score more than 500 goals in professional hockey. Glover, who scored four times in 31 games with Chicago in 1952 in his only National League trial, scored twice for Cleveland Barons in weekend American League games to run his career total to 501. Only Maurice "Rocket" Richard, the retired Montreal ace, and Detroit's Gord Howe have scored more. . . . Vancouver swimmer Elaine Tanner bettered the women's world 400-yard freestyle record at Durban, South Africa, but the mark may not be recognized. Elaine, 15, swam the distance in four minutes, 45.8 seconds, half a second better than the current record. However, a time of 4:38.3, posted by Cathy Wainwright of Australia, is awaiting recognition. . . . Miss Tanner also won a butterfly race but was beaten in backstroke by world record holder Karen Muir.

Paul Takaishi, former U.S. marine from Hawaii, knocked out Carl Penelope of the Philippines at Tokyo and earned a title shot against Italy's Sandro Lopopolo, the world junior welterweight king. . . . Dejordy Backs Up Black Hawk Guns In Record Streak

MONTREAL (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks are riding the longest undefeated streak in their history as they continue to pull away from the five other National Hockey League clubs and move toward their first league title.

But while the Hawks hold a commanding lead in the standings, there are only nine points separating the second- and fourth-place clubs.

While Chicago's scoring guns continue to explode against all opposition, the club's defensive effort, led by goalie Denis DeJordy, cannot be overlooked.

DeJordy, 28-year-old native of St. Hyacinthe, Que., has appeared in 12 of Chicago's last 14 games, in which the Hawks have won 11 and tied three.

DeJordy's goals-against average over that streak is a brilliant 1.75, more than a goal a game lower than his average for the 17 games he appeared in during the first half of the season. He also has three shut-outs in the second half of the schedule.

Last season, DeJordy was with St. Louis of the Central Professional Hockey League at his own request. He felt he could benefit more by playing full time in the minors rather than appearing in only a few games in the NHL as he did in 1964-65.

DeJordy's play, combined with the injured Glenn Hall's average of 2.33, the lowest individual figure in the league, gives Chicago a combined average of 2.37, best in the league.

Hal Malone LOOKS AT SPORTS

Hello, out there! It's nice to know you're still breathing.

In a recent column I mentioned that directors of the National Hockey League "in the common good" (alias you-know-who's good) had set up strange ground rules for the forthcoming player draft.

They protected a goalkeeper and 11 players, instead of shielding say, their best seven athletes.

The thesis here was that the six expansion clubs would have to look in closets, under beds and in exotic places like Patched Pants, Sask., to fill their sweaters.

This provoked a foaming at the fountain pen of Mrs. George Lawrie, 924 Collinson, Victoria.

She writes:

"I wonder just how far you look after reading your exuberant column on expansion and how those foolish expansionists will have to — and I quote — 'reach all the way to Patched Pants, Sask., to fill their rosters.'"

"Most anyone looking would know Saskatchewan would be the last place to have any success. Scouts are there all the time, snapping up young players for the big leagues. They don't find it far at all to look."

San Diego Scenery Easy on Eyes . . .

"On all the rosters you'll find Patched Panthers starring in every position from goalie to coach."

"A Patched Panther playing for the team here would look much like a Globe Trotter playing on a high school basketball team. In fact he could star here if he wore mini skirts. Looking at the statistics, perhaps that is what all the team wears."

"... Headlines read 'Leads can grab fifth place tonight.' Fifth place in a seven-team league and the season half gone? Big deal !!! Whom are you kidding?"

Mrs. George Lawrie. A Patched Pants grandmother, witness Don Whitman for one.

You ask, madam, how far I look. It all depends, really, on what you're looking at.

Bill Walker, for example, wrote in a recent Victoria hockey program of the scenic joys one comes across while travelling.

He accompanied the Leads on their last California safari and had to wait with the players for two hours to catch a delayed plane at Los Angeles.

To pass the time, penned Mr. Walker (20-20 vision), the group "was forced to look at the scenery which sat cross-legged on her luggage waiting for her father."

'Patched Pants' Ahead of Yugoslavia To verify Mrs. Lawrie's claim that Patched Panthers dominate professional hockey rosters, I perused a copy (1965-66) of the official National Hockey League record book. Perused is hardly adequate.

From Amadio, David, to Zeldi, Lawrence, there are 119 pages, madam, and I read — and made notes — on every one. Statistically it may be of interest to learn that Ontario has spawned 167 players. Quebec was the birthplace of 62 and Manitoba — which is on the fringe of Patched Pants, Sask. — is where 42 pros call home.

Saskatchewan is far ahead of Yugoslavia, England, Czechoslovakia or Newfoundland which have sent only one native son into hockey's flesh market.

Patched Pants is even ahead of the U.S., which has three, New Brunswick (six), Nova Scotia or B.C. (eight each).

In fact Patched Pants with 41 is nine ahead of Alberta, which is burdened with Social Credit.

I don't know if Patched Panthers in mini skirts would greatly enhance the fortunes of the Victoria Maple Leafs. But if it would make you feel better I will ask Sandy Hueul (Eaton, Sask.), Louis-Casimir-Jankowski (Regina), Gordon-Redehi (Kinistino, Sask.) and Rolfe Wilcox (Rose Valley, Sask.) if they will consider it.

A Terribly Hard Decision To Make You take a dim view, madam, of headlines which blare "Leads Can Grab 4th Place Tonight." You are not alone. Mr. Francis Mario, the resident genius, and Mr. Alan Houle, the general manager in charge of worrying, take the same view.

They would much rather see headlines which proclaim "Leads Can Grab 1st Place Tonight." Good for the ulcers and the box office.

You are absolutely right when you say that sports chroniclers

Council Ready to Take Deeper Look at Boxing

TIME OUT
By JEFF KEATE

"To give you an idea of how tough a game this is going to be, here goes their water boy now!"

QUEBEC (CP)—The National Fitness Council today stands ready to take a deeper look at amateur boxing in Canada to determine whether the sport is worth continued financial support.

At the conclusion of a two-day meeting held here in conjunction with the opening of the first Canadian Winter Games, Bill L'Heureux, newly-elected chairman of the council, said the latest move is not a reversal of a previous stand taken by the body.

The earlier ruling threatened to remove boxing from a list of sports awarded grants annually by the federal government through the council until the sport demonstrated that something was being done about the incidence of brain damage caused by head blows.

MUST BE FLEXIBLE
L'Heureux, head of the physical education department of the University of Western Ontario at London, said that any such committee should be restricted to five or six members to keep it flexible.

"The council is getting together with the CABA to inquire as to how we can assist them to study the whole program of amateur boxing and make such changes that will satisfy the chief complaints."

He was referring to an earlier controversial ruling that the council could not support boxing financially until it was clearly demonstrated that the sport was doing all possible to eliminate the possibility of brain damage caused by head blows.

CAUSES CONCERN

L'Heureux said that when the ruling was made last fall the council believed there was enough evidence "to clearly indicate there was sufficient incidence of brain damage to cause concern."

In the ensuing controversy, Al Decarie of Montreal, CABA president, was called before a special council session in Montreal to show cause why the federal grants should be continued.

Decarie's argument was that it was already mandatory for amateur boxers to wear head gear.

Subsequent investigation showed that several provincial chairmen were not enforcing the national president's instructions below the provincial and national level of bouts.

Rugby Tour Too Long Says Pilot

LONDON (UPI)—The touring Australian Rugby Union team, which won two of five test matches on its tour of Britain and France, passed through London today en route to Canada where it will play two matches.

Manager Bill McLaughlin, 51, said the tour was "too long" and he favored only 24 matches in future.

The Wallabies record in Britain and France was: Played 24, won 17, tied 3, lost 4. They scored 348 points and conceded 322.

The team returns home after two matches in Vancouver.

Giants Could Use A Wandering Fran

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—The welcome mat already is out here for unhappy Fran Tarkenton. If the Minnesota Viking quarterback is looking for a new football home as he says he is, the last-place New York Giants "definitely are interested," but they

"No one gives anything away for nothing," commented Giant coach Alie Sherman, fully aware that the 26-year-old Tarkenton has said he'll quit if the Vikings don't deal him to another club.

"If he's available, certainly we'd be interested and we'd want to take a good strong look at him, but no one gives away a ball player just like that. Not quarterbacks, anyway. They're a breed apart. They draw a different kind of music."

Tarkenton never gave any reason for wishing to leave the Vikings although he and Norm Van Brocklin didn't exactly get along like Damon and Pythias.

The resignation of Van Brocklin during the weekend didn't cause Tarkenton to bat an eye, however.

"In no way at all does this affect my original statement to the Vikings expressing my desire not to play there next season," he insisted from his home in Atlanta. "I would like to stay in the game with some team, other than the Vikings. I have no preference as to which team."

While Tarkenton has made himself available in a sense, he is by no means alone. As a matter of fact, he has to take his turn in line.

Gary Cuozzo claims he doesn't care to keep vegetating in Baltimore behind Johnny Unitas; Norm Snead doesn't like it anymore in Philadelphia; George Mira is tired of looking at John Brodie's back in San Francisco, and Roman Gabriel isn't sure where he stands in Los Angeles.

Such a situation, along with Tarkenton's sudden pique at the Vikings, gives a club like the Giants a lot of running room.

They lost Gary Wood to New Orleans in the expansion draft and the only quarterbacks with any experience they have left are Earl Morrall, still recuperating from a broken wrist, and Continental League graduate Tom Kennedy.

Ordinarily, New Orleans, as the NFL's newest member, would get first choice in next month's draft and the Giants, because of their pitiful 1-13 record, would have next pick. But when the NFL and AFL merged last summer, the Giants were awarded a special first choice in this year's draft, providing they go for a quarterback.

There is every likelihood they will.

"We can't just get any quarterback," said Sherman, who was going over his notes at home in preparation for the draft. "We gotta get someone special. We know the college picture and feel Steve Spurrier, Bob Griese and Don Horn are the top three. But we haven't made up our minds whether we'll go for a college quarterback or an established one in our league."

"We're taking our time. The situation sometimes changes. Look what happened the last few days."

That's right. The Giants have to look before they leap. On the other hand, he hesitates is lost.

Ticket Holder Levels Blast At B.C. Coach

VANCOUVER (CP)—Coach Dave Skrien defended his record with British Columbia Lions at the football club's annual meeting Monday night after an outburst by season ticket holder Henry Green.

Green, club member since the Western Football Conference team's inception, said from the floor that fans were disillusioned with Skrien and his assistants during the last two seasons.

He said the Lions' failed to make the playoffs despite paying players record salaries and that instead of strengthening the team after the 1964 Grey Cup victory, Skrien was too busy writing a book, Countdown to Grey Cup.

"I'll stand up here next year and ask Mr. Green to make a rebuttal of his remarks," Skrien said after telling the meeting he was optimistic about the 1967 season.

VEWS OF HUNDREDS

The coach said that Green's remarks didn't bother him. He said club problems last season no longer existed.

Eleven new players had been signed for 1967 and two new coaches, Tony Knap from Utah State and Ron Morris, a former Lions player.

Green said in an interview after the meeting that his views were those of hundreds of fans he had spoken to about the Lions.

In other business, club treasurer Ian Bell reported a 1966 operating loss of almost $10,000, due largely to an increase of salaries and training expenses of $63,000.

Bell reported that despite record season ticket sales of 21,000, game revenues decreased $50,000. The slump in receipts, however, resulted in a lower gate equalization being paid the four other Western Conference clubs. The gate equalization assessment for 1966 was $45,000 compared with $63,000 the previous year.

Retiring president Alan Eyre regretted the departure this year of former general manager Herb Capozzi.

"It is still our hope that he will come day fill the position as commissioner of the Canadian Football League," he said. The comment was interpreted by observers to mean that Eyre was not satisfied with the recent appointment of commissioner Keith Davey. He said stories and comments surrounding Senator Davey had given Canadian football a "black eye."

CAPOZZI UNAVAILABLE

"This whole situation must be resolved, and resolved quickly at the annual meeting two weeks from now," Eyre said.

Al McEachern, incoming president, was asked after the meeting if this meant the Lions would press for Davey's ouster. "I feel the fellow deserves a hearing," said McEachern, 39-year-old lawyer and former Western Conference president.

"We spoke with him a month ago, and we'll have another talk with him at the annual meeting."

McEachern dismissed the suggestion that Capozzi be appointed commissioner. "He's just not available."

PSYCHIATRIST SAYS

Hypnosis Helps Cassius to Win

By GRANVILLE WATTS

LONDON (AP)—A leading British psychiatrist said Saturday he thinks Cassius Clay wins his fights with the help of hypnosis.

Dr. Peter Tarnesby, consultant psychiatrist to a number of London hospitals, said he was convinced Clay hypnotized Ernie Terrell before their world title fight in Houston last week.

"In my opinion Terrell was clearly under Clay's hypnotic influence when they fought in Houston," Dr. Tarnesby said.

"Clay may be unaware he possesses hypnotic powers. It is quite possible he is doing it without knowledge."

Dr. Tarnesby, 46, said he first suspected Clay had hypnotic powers after seeing a film of the champion's second fight with Sonny Liston.

Clay knocked Liston out with a much-debated punch which some experts claimed wasn't a punch at all.

"He begins at the pre-fight weigh-in by staring at his opponent and I think the stare is hypnotic," Dr. Tarnesby said.

"Liston looked like a man in a trance many seconds after he had been counted out. Yet the knock-out punch hardly seemed fierce enough to hurt a child."

"It was as though Clay waved a magic wand and Liston went to sleep."

Dr. Tarnesby said he studied films taken before and during last week's fight.

"There were some dramatic pictures taken at the weigh-in showing Clay staring at Terrell. Among hypnotists this is known as the induction of eye fixation. It is the classical method of hypnosis."

"I believe Clay used what we call the repetitive verbal stimulus technique during the fights."

REPEAT QUESTION
"The sequence of words—in this case 'What's my name?'—repeated over and over again is a recognized hypnotic technique. Used in a medically correct way it keeps the subject under hypnosis."

Asked what powers Clay would need as a hypnotist, Dr. Tarnesby said:

"He has to be a very strong personality and must believe in himself. Who can doubt that Cassius Clay believes in himself?"

He said a hypnotist must have a magnetic personality and be able to press his own mind upon the minds of others.

Would he fancy a confrontation with Clay?

"I'd like to talk this over with him—outside the ring, of course," Dr. Tarnesby said.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—

Floyd Patterson, aiming at a return match with boxing king Cassius Clay, extended his comeback string to three Monday night with a third-round knockout of outclassed Willie Johnson of Miami, Fla.

Patterson was in command all the way as he won his 45th victory against five losses.

Patterson, nine pounds heavier than Johnson at 196, slashed his opponent's right eye in the second with a quick flurry of punches.

OSLO, Norway (AP)—Oes

Verkirk, a 24-year-old Dutch bartender, finished second in the 1,500 and then won the gruelling 10,000 metres to retain his world speed skating championship with a world record low score of 178.58 points.

The Netherlands made it 1-2 for the second straight year with the same skaters as 22-year-old Ard Schenk earned the runner-up position with first place in the 1,500 and fourth in the 10,000 for a second low score of 178.533.

American Football for Birds

TORONTO (CP)—Judge

Roy Hofheinz, president of the Houston Sports Association, predicts that soccer will rival baseball for the U.S. entertainment dollar within 10 years.

"American football is for the birds, baseball is still the greatest game, but I think soccer will run it a close second," he said today.

Here to attend a meeting today and Wednesday of the new North American Soccer League, Hofheinz said that soccer is the easiest sport in the world to watch and added that "hockey wasn't too much."

He supported his argument that baseball is the greatest by pointing out that attendance at Houston Astro's home games was 2,242,240 last year while paid attendance at all other sporting events in the Astrodome was only 1,844,230.

Canada Split by Parliament, Not Press, Says Journalist

By PETE LOUDON

Parliament and the people of Canada are responsible for national disunity—not the press. This was the message of nationally syndicated columnist Peter Newman in a seminar on the press and national unity at the University of Victoria Monday night.

He said the country is "divided, neurotic, directionless." "What it seems to need to unite is to either get a new leader or a great issue."

He was stumped on realizing how far out of touch Ottawa has become with the real Canada.

"At a time like this the main institution of the country, our Parliament, should be in emergency and united session to find a way out, to at least attempt a solution to the grave difficulties that divide us."

"Instead, it seems to me that our legislators — and I include members of all parties — are getting further and further away from the problems that really count."

"As a result it may be that we now have two distinct kinds of public issues — parliamentary issues that take up most of Parliament's time — and national issues which are the real problems of our society."

Mr. Newman said Canadian politicians have removed themselves from the mainstream of events that matter. He said it is no longer true "that an enormous momentum can be developed" by a Canadian people which feels itself as one with its parliament.

The dilemma, he said, is to find how the executive branch of the government can be set free from the paralyzing grip of the legislators, "without at the same time destroying the democratic process."

"In my view Canada's most serious dilemma is not the French-English confrontation or the paralysis of our parliamentary system, or the takeover of a major share of our resources by the U.S."

"It is the erosion of the belief that something meaningful can be done to solve our problems. Lacking unity of purpose, we don't believe in ourselves."

"A new generation of Canadians must move into the command posts. We haven't had a prime minister who was under 60 since 1935."

Mr. Newman said that if Canada cannot find a way of making its role in the English-French problem more effective, she will subtract from the reasons Quebec must find for remaining in Confederation.

"I believe that Quebec is marching toward independence and only the most immediate and enlightened action will prevent it."

He said he agreed the press of Canada could do a better job in the over-all problem. But if you compare the press of Canada with that of the U.S. and U.K. "I think you'll find in general that our dailies compare pretty well."

The dailies contribute to national unity by disseminating news of Canada to all its regions. When he visited the CBC-TV headquarters he noticed everyone reading newspapers. Television is changing the function of newspapers. TV gives flash impressions but the newspapers have to explain what they mean and provide meaningful background.

Mr. Newman said most politicians prefer a TV interview to a newspaper interview because they can usually count on winning in a verbal duel and can "get their message across," without the interlocutory function of the press reporter.

He said newspaper editorial writers, with some exceptions, today are placing national considerations ahead of parochial prejudice. But he could see the need of a national newspaper.

"At least one paper should be able to command a national audience."

The alternative is a national press, Maclean's once filled this need, but no longer, he said.

A charge of malfeasance of duty was laid against the press of Canada — and particularly a section of the press of British Columbia — by Donald Gordon, a professor of political science at Waterloo University.

He said a sampling of the press of British Columbia devoted less space to biculturalism in a six-month period than to the comic strip Peanuts.

He gave these results of a study of 23 daily newspapers including three in B.C., the Sun and the now defunct Times of Vancouver, and The Daily Colonist of Victoria.

French language dailies devoted 3,406 column inches to the subject, 23 inches per issue.

English language papers devoted 1,753 column inches to the problem of the conciliation of English-French problems — about 12 column inches per issue.

But in British Columbia the coverage worked out to about half that or 948.6 column inches, said Mr. Gordon.

He said in a study of national news printed in dailies, the Sun ranked 16th, the Colonist ranked 23rd and the Vancouver Times ranked 27th. Each ranked lower than they ranked in circulation. (The Sun is second, the Colonist 26th and the Vancouver Times was 19th.) Two Montreal French language papers were the leaders in the publication of national news.

Mr. Gordon conceded, however, that "there is no doubt the audience was not very interested in biculturalism and B.C. newspapers had little choice. And he said in the case of the "anemic Times and Colonist" they haven't got the space to print all the national news that comes to them.

The other speakers, Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate and Times publisher Arthur Irwin defended the press. Here are other highlights of the discussion:

● Mr. Gordon — The press must accommodate itself to a world shrunken by faster travel and communication and a possible melding of newspaper, television and radio purposes, the day when a television may produce a "facsimile" newspaper in the home. It must also recognize that people may soon be so belabored by communication media that only news contrived to appear as entertainment will seep through.

● Mr. Keate — The Canadian Press fostered unity when the English language newspapers, 90 per cent of the association, paid for a French news service to be used exclusively by the 12 French dailies of Canada. English-speaking newspapermen travel often to Quebec and maintain bureaus there, which incidentally is not reciprocated by Quebec newspapers.

● Mr. Irwin — He welcomed Mr. Gordon's criticisms and pointed out that the technological changes have already been started. The Times, for instance, is using a computer in the setting of type. It would be wrong to suggest that the newspapers were not gearing for change. He rejected the possibility that eventually TV images would replace the spoken word.

"If ever we reach that stage, we'll be on the way back to savagery."

He said he was not sure there was a diminishing interest in hard news. Many newspapers are spending a great deal more in its dissemination.

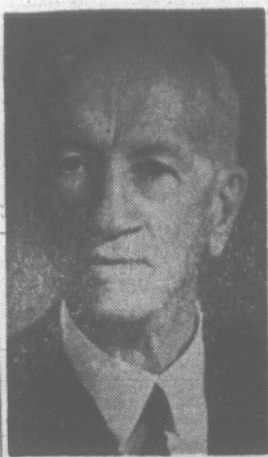

● Mr. Newman — He told a questioner that more news from Ottawa would not dishearten people but would bring about reforms. If newspapers become more sophisticated, so do readers, so will politicians "and the country will stay together."

This improvement is now appearing. In the Ottawa press gallery in recent years newspapermen are doing more digging and there are "fewer political secrets."

● Mr. Keate — Explaining the methods of his paper in determining the choice of news, "We sit down together and try to arrive at a consensus, try to do what is best in the interests of the community and the country. I guess we fail as often as we succeed, but the process is free, honest and independent. We make mistakes, but God help us we do our best."

● Mr. Irwin — He said that in 35 years in newspaper and magazine work he can recall a day when political stories were slanted, but this is no longer the case and any paper which would operate now with slanted news, would fail.

"This means of communication is an essential function. If it disappeared it would have to be invented tomorrow. The process is essential to the survival of a viable, democratic society."

Elderly Woman Gets $4,866 After Mishap

An elderly Victoria woman has been awarded $4,866 damages because of injuries she sustained when knocked down by a car at the intersection of Rockland Avenue and Terrace Road on Jan. 10, 1966.

Mrs. Edith Elizabeth Priest, 1511 Rockland, said she was struck while walking across the intersection by a car owned by David Motors Ltd. of 1101 Yates and driven by Brian Tucker, an employee of the company.

In B.C. Supreme Court, Mr. Justice P. D. Seston awarded damages totalling $6,083, but found that Mrs. Priest was 20 per cent to blame for the accident. He therefore awarded her 80 per cent of the total figure.

DEMONSTRATION Patrick J. Sinnott, appearing for Mrs. Priest, said Mr. Tucker was demonstrating the car to a prospective purchaser when the accident occurred.

He claimed that Mr. Tucker was driving at an unsafe speed in view of a difficult contour in Rockland Avenue at the point where it approached Terrace Road.

Mr. Sinnott asked for general and special damages, including medical expenses, stating that Mrs. Priest suffered severe injuries and, since the accident, had been a patient at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

He said she would continue as a hospital patient for an indefinite period.

Kenneth Murphy, counsel for David Motors and Mr. Tucker, the driver, held that Mrs. Priest did not keep a proper lookout for traffic while crossing the intersection.

GAS PRICE STUDY

Liberals Demand Shuffle For Bigger Committee Role

Liberal Leader Ray Perrault, in a rare move Monday, challenged the proposed composition of a special legislative committee as being loaded against his party.

His protest killed Attorney-General Robert Bonner's attempt to have the committee on gasoline prices constituted by the legislature without advance notice but Mr. Bonner said he would re-submit the proposed committee through formal channels.

Mr. Perrault refused to give unanimous consent because the committee's composition would seat nine Social Credit members, four NDP members and only one Liberal.

Multiplying these proportions by six (the number of Liberal MLAs) would indicate the NDP had 24 MLAs and Socreds 54 when in fact the party standings are six Liberals, 16 NDP and 33 Socreds, he said.

SIX SOCREDS A fair proportion of committee seats would have been one Liberal, three NDP and six Socreds, he said.

Outside the House, he said he only nominated Alan Macfarlane (L—Oak Bay) when asked by Mr. Bonner to propose his party's representation but he has been in correspondence with the attorney-general for 10 days protesting the ratios used in setting up committees.

Other committees established so far have had one Liberal, four NDP and eight Socreds each.

ONE MORE "We had the same representation on committees when there were only two Liberal members in the House," he told reporters.

"We had this formula when there were five of us, but we elected another member last year."

"I am not going to put up any longer with this shoddy treatment from the government."

He said he would demand convening of a special committee headed by Mr. Bonner appointed on opening day to recommend the composition of committees to draw up a new formula. That steering committee has three Socreds, one NDP and one Liberal as members.

Oceanographers Plan Rally Here

A two-day scientific conference of oceanographers will be held Friday and Saturday at Empress Hotel.

About 130 persons are expected to attend from universities and government agencies at Victoria, Corvallis, Ore., Naino and Seattle, Wash. Others may attend from California and Alaska.

The talks, the Pacific Northwest Oceanographic Conference, will discuss current projects and future research.

Post Office Game Upsets Okanagan Way of Life

Liberal MLAs have been accused of almost everything this session by government members.

Now it's playing "post office."

"Honorable members romped through my constituency during the last provincial election campaign peddling federal post offices," said Mrs. Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) Monday.

"I find myself in the position of having unwanted post offices, uneconomic post offices, post offices which will upset the very way of life of my people."

"Mr. Speaker," continued the minister without portfolio, "I have post offices coming out of my ears in the North Okanagan Valley — except in the one centre of Oryama where the people want a post office, have been asking for a post office and have been denied a post office."

Mrs. Jordan also berated the Liberal members, "in particular Dr. Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) for failing to 'leave the establishing of a regional college in the Okanagan Valley to the people in the Okanagan Valley.'"

Tourists All Year Urged for Province

The third of the provincial government's new cabinet ministers to make her debut in the legislature had some plans Monday for another newcomer — the fledgling department of travel industry.

Mrs. Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) outlined in six points her "hopes" for the department. They are:

● The rearrangement of employee vacation patterns by employers "to smooth the distressing peaks and valleys of our hospitality industry";

● The attraction of tourists on a year-round basis;

● The offer of incentives and encouragement to communities developing off-season attractions;

● The cultivation of reciprocal tourist facilities — i.e., the promotion of one region of the province by another;

● The expansion of B.C. historic sites;

● Development of Peace and Columbia power projects as tourist attractions to rival Boulder and Grand Coulee dams in the United States.

Mrs. Jordan, a professional nurse, also asked for the study of a closed-circuit television program for education of the handicapped.

Allied with this, she suggested, might be a program for the gifted student to allow him to get the best training while remaining within the community.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Unrestricted Hearings Ordered on Buttle

Legislative Reporter

The provincial government has decided against a court appeal and has ordered the pollution control board to hold unrestricted hearings into the Buttle Lake controversy, it was revealed Monday.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan announced in the legislature the board has been asked to hold the hearings "at its earliest convenience."

Outside the House, he said anyone who wished to make a point could go to the hearings because it would not be restricted to the Campbell River Water Board which succeeded on a technicality in a court case in invalidating the board's permits to Western Mines.

Mr. Kiernan told reporters the situation has become "quite confused" since the court case and many persons and organizations—he mentioned specifically the B.C. Wildlife biologists who condemned the mine operation in a provincial park had voiced opinions.

"So I think it would be better if the board heard all the people who have something to say, not just the water board," he added. "Then if anyone still had objection, they could still appeal to the cabinet."

He pointed out this might come if the board found that the company should not dump its tailings into Buttle Lake but should be granted an even larger area of the park for establishing a permanent tailings dump on land.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner, also outside the legislature, revealed the government had dropped its consideration of appealing the court judgment to the Supreme Court of Canada because all that was involved was procedure and not the merits.

"I don't think there's any purpose in an appeal when the answer is a procedural alteration," he said.

Mr. Kiernan told the legislature that the court had ruled out the permits not because there had been no public hearing but because the board had not given Campbell River Water Board sufficient time to perfect its objection.

He said most people did not realize that Buttle Lake is 45 miles, three lakes and three dam penstock systems away from the point at which Campbell River Water Board diverts water into its distribution system.

He also pointed out that since the permits had been thrown out, Western Mines has been dumping its tailings on land and this produces the danger that erosion could sweep the material into the surface waters of Buttle Lake and pollute it.

"In the light of all the information that can be mustered, a practical and more acceptable solution can be found, then by all means this solution should be applied to this vexing situation," he said.

"The fact of the matter is that the government is of the opinion that the logical thing to do is to have the pollution control board hear this matter at the earliest convenience."

'Don't Bury Issues Under Sea of Noise'

CAMPBELL RIVER—Lawyer Anthony Sarich rejoiced today in the promise of an unrestricted public hearing into the Buttle pollution problem.

Mr. Sarich, who represents the local water district in opposing dumping of tailings into the lake, said the board will welcome expert testimony. But he hoped people would not use the hearing as a political arena, "burying the issues under a sea of noise."

ONLY SOLUTION—He drew attention to Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan's suggestion that tailings might be dumped on land.

This is the only solution, he said. The aesthetic value of that area of Strathcona Park is already destroyed. There is a safe area for such a dump west of the mine and rainfall would have no effect on it, he said.

GENOA BAY

Dairyman Dies In Cabin Fire

GENOA BAY—Dairy worker William Webber, 64, died Monday as he slept in the four-roomed cabin he shared at a Genoa Bay farm.

Mr. Webber had been up early milking cows and bottling milk and, after breakfast, had gone to lie down.

The fire was spotted by the farm's teamster, David Grierson, who shared the cabin with Mr. Webber and herdsman Albert Ellis.

Mr. Grierson tried to enter the cabin but was driven back by the intense heat and smoke. Neighbors and a public works crew from North Cowichan fought the fire but could only keep it from spreading to an adjacent stable.

The cabin was gutted and it was some hours after the outbreak at 9:30 a.m. that Mr. Webber's body could be recovered.

Genoa Bay Farm is six miles east of Duncan and outside a fire protection district.

Thomas H. Lines, farm owner, said he had no idea what might have caused the fire.

Mr. Webber, a bachelor, was a member of St. John Ambulance Society, a keen fisherman and photographer, and a member of Cowichan branch of the Royal Canadian Legion.

A coroner's inquiry will be held.

ISLAND DIGEST

Man, 33, Dies After Drinking Wood Alcohol

CAMPBELL RIVER—One man is dead and four others are in critical condition in Campbell River Hospital today after drinking wood alcohol.

RCMP said the dead man is Fred Blaney, 33, of the Churchhouse Indian Reserve on the mainland, 35 miles north-east of Campbell River.

His four companions, John Wilson, Clarence Paul, Bruce Wilson and Albert Hackett were unconscious when they were taken to hospital aboard an RCMP patrol boat on Monday.

Driver Jailed For 6 Months

Richard Sawyer, 31, of East Sooke Rd., was jailed for six months Saturday after pleading guilty to driving while impaired and while his licence was under suspension.

Cowichan RCMP officers found Sawyer slumped over the wheel of his car early Saturday on Metehosin Road. He had similar convictions on both counts, court was told.

GOING DOWN spread-eagled but under control is crew member from Air-Sea Rescue helicopter during weekend exercise at Cassidy Airport near Nanaimo.

TYPHOID VICTIM 'FAIRLY GOOD'

Schoolrooms Disinfected, Cafes, Pubs Checked Out

LAKE COWICHAN—Public health authorities Monday stepped up a program of precautionary measures after the discovery of a case of typhoid here.

Mojinder Jagpal, 3, of Lake Cowichan, is in the Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria. His condition is fairly good.

Douglas Roe, health inspector, said Lake Cowichan Elementary School, attended by Mojinder's brothers and sisters, was disinfected Monday and extra precautions taken in the school washrooms.

All contacts of the family were interviewed and will be given protective inoculations.

Cafes and beer parlours were checked to ensure their sterilization procedures are up to standard.

GIVEN SHOTS

Friday, when the case was diagnosed as typhoid, the Jagpal house and surroundings were checked and disinfected and the immediate family given protective inoculations.

All water supplies were also checked and in some instances treated with extra measures of chlorine.

Great Law But It Doesn't Work

PORT ALBERNI—The provincial Pollution Control Act was described Sunday as one of the finest pieces of legislation on the continent—on paper.

"But in practice it is gobbledygook," Tom Parkin, organizer for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, told a public meeting on pollution control.

He told the audience he asked Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell what would happen if the pollution control board ordered a municipality to cease pollution, and then ratepayers voted down a bylaw to provide a sewage plant.

He said the minister told him "nothing could be done."

The meeting was also told by Art Roy, anti-pollution engineer at MacMillan-Bloedel pulp mill, that elimination of all cars would cut half the world's pollution.

Port Alberni Mayor Lee Hammer said the pollution board "has only five men. We can't get unbiased help. We can't even get them to come up here for a look."

$25 Dog Licences Studied As Stray Nuisance on Rise

By DON DINGWALL
DUNCAN—Dog licences in the city may be hiked as high as $25 in an effort to curb the nuisance of stray dogs.

City council Monday evening tabled a request from the SPCA for a grant.

Ald. James Saunders said: "The SPCA is taking our money and then saying they can't do the job of controlling the dogs."

"We should keep the money and do the job ourselves,"

Ald. Saunders said the local SPCA branch gets 90 per cent of the dog licence fees and last year received a $1,000 capital grant.

"Why should we spend so much on dogs when we quibble about giving a grant toward the training of retarded children?"

Council had earlier referred to a committee a request from Duncan Association for Retarded Children for a grant.

Ald. Hamish Mutter defended the SPCA, saying it looked after the city's problem to the extent of destroying a large number of stray cats and dogs.

"DO IT OURSELVES"—"We should consider what it would cost us to do the job ourselves."

Mayor Jack Dobson said stray dogs are an uncontrollable problem unless council enforces its leash law.

"Some cities have raised their licence fees to $15."

Ald. Martin Lukaitis said: "The price should be $25 or $30 and that would soon stop the problem." (Licences now cost $3 to $5.)

Council was told that in the full year since the SPCA inspector was authorized to ticket the owners of stray dogs only one ticket has been issued.

Ald. Saunders said: "Nothing is being done. You can't tell me the inspector is so busy he can only issue one ticket."

"We should not be paying $600 for this service. The SPCA do other work and should get some form of grant but not for this job."

UNITED APPEAL STUDIED

DUNCAN—City council will investigate setting up a United Appeal here instead of allowing a succession of tag days.

Ald. James Saunders said Monday: "There are almost more appeals nowadays than there are Saturdays."

"We should examine the possibility of a United Appeal rather than this haphazard way of trying to please everyone."

Mayor Jack Dobson cautioned it would be difficult to get a number of the charity organizations to submerge their identity as they did extremely well on their own.

Ald. Saunders said the organizations would have to agree on the "sp" of the combined pot.

Man Requested Night in Jail

A man who asked Cowichan RCMP officers to jail him because he had no place to sleep was given a suspended sentence Saturday.

David Swan of no fixed address pleaded guilty to vagrancy. He was turned out of his lodgings Friday night and went to the police office because he did not want to wander on the highway all night, court was told.

Youth Fined $75 For 'Outrageous' Street Attack

A 17-year-old who earlier this month admitted attacking a boy, 15, who he did not know, was fined $75 Monday.

"It's outrageous when boys like you ride around the streets, then get out and attack younger boys," Magistrate Oester told Keith Morgan of 4853 Happy Valley Road.

Court was told at an earlier hearing that Morgan was one of five youths in the car cruising on Gorge Road Jan. 8.

He knocked down the 15-year-old when the boy refused to fight.

"You might not be so enthusiastic if some older boys tried the same thing on you," the magistrate told Morgan.

Reduction Proposed In Parking Fines

DUNCAN—City council and downtown businessmen will meet Thursday to discuss reduction of parking violation fines from $2 to $1.

Mayor Jack Dobson promised Monday that council would then make a decision on the advisory planning commission recommendation to make the reduction.

The commission made the suggestion Monday and said council should embark on a plan to acquire more land for public parking.

Ald. Thomas Kilpatrick said the city's whole parking system needs to be reviewed.

"Why should people be penalized for shopping in Duncan? A reduction in the fine would be the start of a better parking relationship between council and the shopping public."

Mayor Dobson said it is not the job of the city to provide off-street parking for people employed in the city.

These workers are spilt and won't even park two blocks from their employer's door.

"The fine is penalizing violators and not shoppers. How can we afford to control parking without the meters?"

Ald. James Saunders said the first move is up to the city and council is looking at certain properties with a view to purchase.

He agreed with the mayor there would have to be a "small charge" for any parking provided in future.

MEETING SOUGHT ON FIELD HOUSE

DUNCAN—The city recreation commission got on council's back Monday about a centennial project.

A proposed field house at Wharfedale Park was shelved when architects came up with a cost estimate of $60,000—double what council was considering spending.

The commission asked for a joint meeting to resolve the question.

Mayor Jack Dobson announced the architects have revised its field house plan, and estimates.

A meeting will be held shortly between council, commission and architects.

Cowichan Indian Centennial Society has asked city council for moral and financial support of a $250,000 project.

Council will invite the Indian committee to discuss the project.

Training Expanded For Nurses?

The provincial government is considering expansion of nurse training facilities at university and feasibility of contracting the non-university training courses from three to two years.

This was indicated by Mrs. Pat Jordan, minister without portfolio, in her maiden speech to the legislature Monday.

A professional nurse herself, Mrs. Jordan said she and Health Minister Wesley Black have begun a "review of the complete training program of nursing in B.C. as related to time."

Outside the legislature, she confirmed this related to a Registered Nurses Association of B.C. request for study on the feasibility of a two-year training course in hospital schools which would require drastic reduction of in-service work by students.

Mrs. Jordan said also under study are the University of B.C. nursing course facilities "with a view to expansion — with an emphasis on the post basic baccalaureate degree or master's program."

BOSTON (UPI) — A University of Massachusetts professor who took 15 months to locate a pair of richly illustrated manuscripts by Leonardo Da Vinci said today it would take two years to translate them.

In announcing his discovery Monday, Dr. Jules Piccus said the manuscripts by the Renaissance artist-scientist comprised some 700 pages and more than 200 drawings, including some of the finest Da Vinci drawings in existence.

They had been missing since before 1800 in the national library of Madrid after being placed there in about 1600, he said.

SOME OF FINEST

Piccus, a 46-year-old Spanish professor at the university, called his discovery "extremely important" because it included "some of the finest and most complete Da Vinci documents in existence."

Dr. Ladislao Reti of the University of California at Los Angeles, who authenticated the documents, said there were "only about 5,000 pages of Da Vinci in the world, so this adds about one-sixth to what we have of the master."

Included in the two manuscripts are work on aviation, architecture and mechanical engineering, he said.

Piccus said the two-year translation period was needed because the texts were described in Da Vinci's characteristic "mirror" — backward — writing. When completed, it will be ready for publication.

STUDS ON SNOW TIRES ENDORSED BY MINISTER

EDMONTON (UPI)—Alberta's highway minister, Gordon Taylor, Monday solidly endorsed tungsten tire studs when he said they were of "tremendous value in reducing skidding on slippery streets and highways and creating a safer winter driving climate."

Taylor, speaking in the provincial legislature Monday night, said a three-year study by his department revealed no significant damage to pavement.

"We recommend the use of tire studs during the winter months. They are another weapon in the fight to reduce traffic accidents and deaths," the minister concluded.

BLUE BOOK BULGING

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Reports of unidentified flying objects boomed last year, reports Maj. Hector Quintanilla, director of Project Blue Book at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

A total of 1,060 sightings were submitted to the air force during 1966, second highest total since Blue Book began keeping tabs 20 years ago. The annual average is 535, the record is 1,501 in 1952.

Of the 11,107 sightings since 1947, Quintanilla says, just 676 remain in the unidentified category.

Unsuccessful Criminal On Probation

HEANOR, England (AP) — The Heanor magistrates gave John Fletcher a chance to go straight Monday after he told them more than 100 thefts in the last 24 years had netted him less than £50 (£150).

Fletcher told the court he has spent 23 years and three months of those 24 years in prison. This time he was charged with breaking into three schools only six days after the end of his last jail stay. His haul from all three jobs: £1 4s (£3.60).

"If there was a title for unsuccessful criminals, I'd have no opposition," Fletcher told the court. He said he finally had decided to try doing an honest job of work.

The magistrates were told Fletcher had been offered a job as a tailor, a craft he learned behind bars. They put him on probation for two years.

MOUNTAIN AVALANCHE

Boy Dies in Snow After Digging Free

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — A 15-year-old boy survived an avalanche which killed his brother, but apparently ran out of energy and died in the snow before rescuers could reach him, an expert said Monday.

A third boy, Billy Dubbled, 12, was not injured in the slide Sunday in the steep Wasatch Mountains which tower above Salt Lake City. He scrambled down the mountain for help and set off a 100-man rescue operation.

It was nine hours before searchers, playing mining lamps over the snow, rocks and debris, spotted the body of 15-year-old Dick Bills.

An hour later, about 10 p.m., the body of his brother, Tom, 14, was found partially buried in five feet of snow about a mile away.

Sgt. Pete Kutulas of the Salt Lake County sheriff's office, a veteran of many search and rescue operations, said:

"Dick may have been partially trapped to begin with, but was able to get out. 'He probably waded around, looking for his brother. ...

"Because of the depth of the snow, the length of time he had been hiking, the crisis, the low temperatures, he was a very tired boy. He ... probably just reached the end of his endurance. ..."

The boys were on a hiking trip.

Biggest Vote In the World Takes 7 Days

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—Indians begin voting Wednesday to choose their government for the next five years, after a campaign highlighted by violence and attacks on candidates.

Slightly more than 250,000,000 people are entitled to vote in the world's biggest election, which takes place during seven days.

Observers generally agreed that the ruling Congress party will get a reduced but still comfortable majority in Parliament, but might lose control of some of the 17 state assemblies.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, whose nose was broken by a stone thrown during an election meeting in Orissa state last week, is expected to remain head of government. But this will not be confirmed until the new Parliament is summoned in April.

WIDELY CRITICIZED

Despite criticism of Mrs. Gandhi during a year of drought, economic stagnation and inflation, there is no other really strong candidate for the leadership, apart from former finance minister Morarji Desai, whom she defeated for the party leadership last year.

Congress party leaders have been the main sufferers in the election campaign violence, but several opposition candidates have been attacked.

The main national challenge to the Congress party is from the right wing Swatantra party and the nationalist Jan Sangh party, backed by Hindu traditionalism and particularly strong in northern and central India.

On the left both the Communists and Socialists are split into antagonistic groups which despite some electoral alliances, hamper their chances.

UBC Professors Send Viet Protest to PM

VANCOUVER (CP) — A petition signed by 328 University of B.C. teachers Monday was sent to Prime Minister Pearson, urging him to pressure the United States to de-escalate the war in Vietnam.

The petition, sponsored by the UBC teachers' committee on Vietnam, asked for a ban on all military materials being sent from Canada to the war-torn country. It also asked the federal government to reveal all military production contracts related in any way to the conflict.

A happy St. Valentine's Day to all true lovers; and for those who flap solitary along life's flyway, a word of cheer. Cupid has been computerized. If you haven't been able to find the right partner, a mechanical brain waits to give you an assist.

The Toronto-based outfit that offers this service describes itself as "The only computer dater coast-to-coast across Canada."

Then, after citing the odds against stumbling on the perfect date as 679,857 to one, it describes how by sophisticated mathematics it plucks the names and telephone numbers of three ideal consorts from its memory bank.

This for $10 — half that if you're a student — with the further assurance that your name will be "kept in constant scan to check you with new compatibles."

If, like me, you managed against those daunting odds to find your ideal girl or guy, you may be tempted to scoff at IBM-directed romance. But for the unblest, this earth can be a devilish lonely place. If a business machine can help these to companionship, who except maybe a suspicious-minded missing persons bureau sergeant would deny them their chance?

Our copy of the Operation Checkmate prospectus tumbled out from between pages of Uvic's bright-eyed "Market," a circumstance which seems to indicate that loneliness can exist even on a campus where young of both sexes swarm.

My Valentine and I promptly settled down to answer the questions asked of each would-be subscriber to the service. These are varied, detailed, and searching enough to justify the sponsor's emphasis upon honest replies.

Here, for instance, is question 9 (I) with its demand that the applicant rate himself or herself on a seven-point scale that begins "unattractive" and ends "extremely attractive." That's even more agonizing than the next query, which requires a self-rating that depends from extremely intelligent to "much below average."

Sexual activity, from a virtuous "never" to a wolfish "very often," is also ferreted out. So is degree of alcohol and tobacco consumption, if any. The computer, nosey to the last degree, also wants to know whether a lasting relationship is aimed at, or merely an opening of "new social horizons."

I'm not sure that last euphemism means, and won't even hazard a guess. In any case, long before my dear mouse and I had finished settling down our answers, we were convinced that the computer, though perhaps a trifle doubtfully, would have permitted us to meet.

For this first step in a relationship which has not only opened new horizons but proved lasting, we had to depend upon the only agency operating in the years before the mechanized brain invaded the hearts-and-flowers field.

This was the luck, or perhaps fate, that brought us to a meeting, then pitched us into a "boy finds girl, loses girl" sequence that would baffle a whole battery of computers.

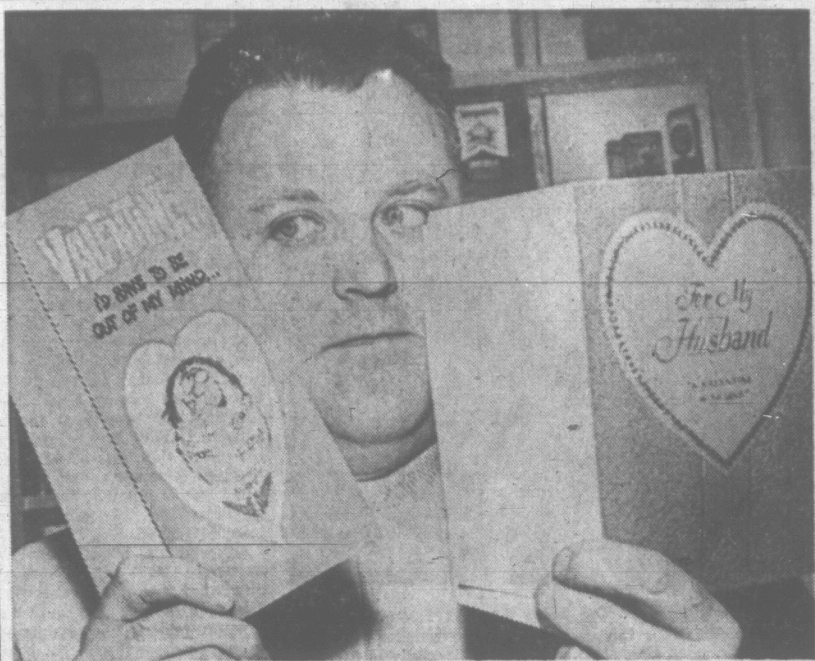

Those, which are guided by logic, would never have permitted us a second meeting after we had flubbed the first.

But luck permitted us to beat odds that would blanch a horseplayer, not once but twice. We did meet again, and ultimately found ourselves, in a mutual state of amazement, being joined by a one-eyed parson in a church outside which a dogwood tree stood in second bloom.

Eventually, if the species lasts that long, computerization may be the rule in all matters, including those of the heart.

But even when that day dawns, certain indefinables that go to the making of a union will persist in messing up the statistics.

You can give love its chance through a computer, but that mercurial emotion can't be machine-punched on a card. There at least, the human spirit insists upon remaining free to withhold or bestow.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN is all part of the day's work when you sell Valentines, says pharmacist Mel Sutherland of 1725 Garnett. The person with large sense of humor gets comic card, and the romantic gets the syrupy model at right—if you guess right.

Safest move is to attach card to a large gift, or tuck a fiver inside. Some of best-loved cards of course will be home made and marked "Dere Mom." Main thing, remember this is Valentine's Day. You'll be on time up until midnight. (Times photo.)

Inside Story Told About Metro Area By 'Working Tool'

A 58-page statistical report on social characteristics of the Metropolitan Victoria region was made public today.

The report was prepared by the Capital Region Planning Board of British Columbia for the Community Welfare Council of Greater Victoria.

"The basic intent of the report is to give a working tool to the many social agencies within the Victoria census metropolitan area," said planning board chairman Allan Cox, the Oak Bay reeve.

"It is hoped that the report will also provide an over-all statistical guide for the community and a common area for data collecting by the agencies and municipalities concerned."

The report, which is available to the public, contains information previously available "but not really accessible," said Tony Roberts, the board's planning director.

Although figures from the 1961 census are used (the next census is not until 1971) he said the value of the report is "not depreciated that much. Very often it is the relative position that is important."

GREATEST GROWTH

Some of the facts from the report:

- The highest population growth from 1956 to 1961 was in the unorganized area west of Victoria and those parts of Saanich near and including Gordon Head.

- The lowest population growth was in a belt south of Harriet and Tolmie and west of Douglas south to James Bay, and from the Inner Harbor to Oak Bay, between Queens-Bay and Fort streets.

- The age group under 14 in 1961 was highest in parts of the unorganized area and in Saanich municipality north of Admirals, Whiteside, Lodge, Cedar Hill, Cross Road and Oak Bay municipalities.

- The age group 65 and over was highest in the city downtown, James Bay and Beacon Hill areas, and lowest in most parts of Saanich and the unorganized areas.

AT SANDOWN

Race Meet Called Off Over Service Fee Row

Won't Pay $150 a Day

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The B.C. Jockey Club has cancelled its 18-day horse racing meet at Sandown Park scheduled for the fall.

Jack Diamond, co-owner of the club, informed North Saanich council Monday there will be no racing in 1967 because of council's decision last year to charge a fee of $150 per day for services.

Describing the fee as "exorbitant," he said in a letter the club regretted making the decision.

But, he added, the racing organization had no other alternative due to council's decision to charge a daily fee of $150, over and above the annual property tax of $2,800 and other demanded expenses.

He did not list the demanded expenditures.

The club did not pay a licence fee when North Saanich was an unorganized district.

$27,000 DEFICIT
"Last year our operation deficit was $27,000," he said. "This did not include your fee of $150 per day."

The fee, still unpaid by the club, was imposed by council last year before a fire destroyed two barns and 15 horses.

Reeve J. B. Cumming took issue with Mr. Diamond.

"We made no exorbitant demand," he said. "I informed Mr. Diamond that he would have to conform to our local bylaws as the rest of us have to."

ALLOWED BY ACT

He noted that the $150 licence fee is the permissible amount as set out in the Municipal Act by the provincial government.

"Since we have to provide traffic control, extra policing, general legal expenses on some of the race track followers, fire fighting, ambulance service, and to contend with difficulties by a concentration of over 1,000 cars in a small area in a short time, I feel that $150 is quite reasonable," he stated.

The reeve pointed out North Saanich has few restaurants, hotels or service stations to make secondary gains on the large concentration of people at the race track.

The race track, he said, contained about 100 acres of land assessed at $400 per acre. The reeve said the other "demanded expenditures" referred to by Mr. Diamond were not too clear.

PERMIT NEEDED

"We told him the owner had to take out a building permit before doing any construction work," he said. "The Metropolitan Health Board has advised that sanitary facilities should be provided, as well as cooking facilities for men who sleep and live in the horse barns."

He said the fire marshal, through the attorney-general's office, recommended the installation of a sprinkler system in the present barns and in any new barns.

"The department also drew to our attention there were no sprinklers in the barns which burned last fall with the loss of valuable horses," the reeve said.

WATER AVAILABLE

"We were able to assure the attorney-general that water supply was available at the race track and has been so for a number of years," he said.

The reeve said he regretted that Mr. Diamond and the Jockey Club had an operating deficit of $27,000.

"We, however, have obligations to the people of North Saanich," he said. "The fire regulations apply to everyone, and of course, the Metropolitan Board of Health is concerned with public health. We must all conform to certain sanitary standards."

Q. When did MacMillan and Bloedel merge and what were they worth at the time? B.V.

A. The merger of these two forest industry giants was announced April 9, 1961. Assets of the H. B. MacMillan Co. were placed at more than $58 million and of Bloedel, Stewart and Welch, $40 million.

Malahat Crash Claims Fourth; One Survives

Inquest Scheduled Tonight at Colwood

A spectacular car crash on the Malahat Saturday which snuffed out the lives of three teenagers claimed a fourth victim early today.

David York, 18, of 786 Goldstream, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd York, died in St. Joseph's Hospital. He suffered multiple injuries and had been listed in critical condition from the time he was rushed to hospital by ambulance.

ONE SURVIVOR

David's brother Fred, 15, is now the lone survivor of the single-car crash at about 7:30 a.m., two miles north of Hall's Boathouse. He is in good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Three of the five young people were found dead when the southbound car smashed through a guard rail and hurtled 150 feet down a rocky bluff.

The other victims were Shawn Eric Adams, 19, of 3114 Mars; Sandra Laws, 17, of 184 Joseph, and Janet Chiasson, also 17, of 1225 Rudlin.

An inquest into all four deaths will start tonight at Sands Funeral Chapel in Colwood.

SCHOOL SEWER HOOK-UP APPROVED

Esquimalt Backs Down

Esquimalt council did an about-face in a pre-council meeting Monday night by permitting a proposed school for Christie Point to hook up to the municipal sewer lines.

The $1 million, 750-student school has been stalled in the planning stages for months because of Esquimalt's refusal to allow tapping of the Christie Point apartments' private sewer line with an eventual hook-up to the Esquimalt main. The outfall is at Lang Cove.

As recently as last Friday Reeve Ray Bryant said his council made the original decision on the advice of engineers who stated that a hook-up with the main line would create troubles for the municipality.

Monday night, in the face of pressure from a hard core of councillors who wished to see the school project go ahead, council reversed its decision. The disposal of sewage in Lang Cove already has the blessings of the Greater Victoria health authorities and the pollution control board.

ALREADY POLLUTED

Both bodies admit that Lang Cove waters are already polluted but they say the injection of the school sewage will make little difference to the existing problem.

In a formal statement this morning Reeve Bryant said the change of heart came after listening to "new alternative proposals" presented by engineers.

Following the discussions Reeve Bryant said council "has decided to allow the discharge of primary treated effluent into the municipal system from Christie Point School."

"This will mean that the effluent will be treated at the site prior to being discharged into the municipal system and will therefore solve the problem of the council's concern for further significant pollution of Lang Cove."

The statement added that times of discharge from a holding tank at the school will be strictly controlled.

School Board chairman Peter Bunn said he is delighted with the Esquimalt decision.

"I am very pleased that the problem has been finally resolved to the satisfaction of Esquimalt council and the school board," he said.

Working drawings for the proposed school have already been forwarded to the department of education in the hope that with sewage disposal obstacle overcome progress on the school will be rapid.

W. G. Gerry, municipal engineer for Esquimalt, said the solution arrived at Monday was "reasonable and logical."

He said the influx of extra sewage into the Esquimalt mains was bound to increase the hazard potential in a system more than 50 years old.

And he stressed that until the school board came up with the proposal to treat sewage at the school site Esquimalt could not possibly have approved the plan.

CARETAKER DIES AT 70

Louis the Parrot Loses Old Friend

One of Victoria's best-known Chinese residents, Wa Wong, caretaker of the famous parrot Louis, died Saturday.

Mr. Wong, 70, of 1706 Denman, gained international attention in the 32 years he lived here.

He will be buried at Royal Oak next Saturday following a funeral service at Sands Mortuary Ltd. at 1 p.m.

Little has been made public about Mr. Wong's life although his illustrious charge has been well publicized because of the bird's involvement in a famous will.

Mr. Wong came here from Canton and went into service for a wealthy spinster, Miss Victoria Wilson, caring for her extensive aviary. Among her many birds was the parrot, or macaw as it is often called, Louis.

When Miss Wilson died 17 years ago, she left Mr. Wong in charge of the birds with a provision in her will for their care during their lifetime. Louis was the sole survivor of recent years. He was maintained in the former Wilson home at 737 Courtney.

Executors of the Wilson estate said at the time of Louis' death the residue of the estate was to be shared by the Red Cross and Royal Jubilee Hospital here. But Louis, now more than 100 years old, lives on.

LOYALTY PRAISED

Recently the executors loved the bird to an unnamed location and announced an allowance had been made for its care and the two other beneficiaries would now receive their due.

Whether Louis was left in Mr. Wong's care was never made public. The executors did add to the announcement, however, by praising Mr. Wong's loyalty and devotion over the years.

Known also as Wong Wah Yue, Mr. Wong is survived by the widow Muriel and daughters Shirley and Beverly.

Improper Words Used in Job Ads Draw Labor Department Warning

The B.C. labor department said today "numerous advertisements in the daily newspapers seeking applicants for employment" contravene the Fair Employment Practices Act.

The warning was contained in the department's weekly summary activities circulated to newspapers and other groups.

"Under this legislation words which are clearly improper for use in advertisements are 'boy,' 'girl' or 'young' and phrases designating an exclusive age group, for example 'ages 20 to 30 years' or a preference for any age under 45 years."

AVOID COMPLAINTS

"The foregoing is published to seek the co-operation of everyone in the matter of complying with the provisions of the statute with respect to advertisements for employment, and to avoid potential complaints which may be made because the advertiser is not familiar with this provision of the act."

Section 5 of the Fair Employment Practices Act reads:

"No person shall use or circulate any form of application for employment, or publish any advertisement in connection with employment, or make any written or oral inquiry in connection with employment which expresses, either directly or indirectly:

- Any limitation, specification or preference as to the race, religion, color, nationality, ancestry or place of any person;

- Any intent to dismiss from employment, or refuse to employ or rehire, or discriminate against any person because of age, if the person has attained the age of 45 years and has not attained the age of 65 years."

This section does not apply "to the expression of a limitation, specification or preference based on a bona fide occupational qualification."

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

The labor department said the act prohibits "in addition to other factors" the publication of any advertisement in connection with employment "which expresses either directly or indirectly any intent to refuse to employ or discriminate against any person because of age, if the person has attained the age of 45 years and has not attained the age of 65 years."

The principle of the provision of the act regarding age discrimination is that every individual will have equal opportunity to compete for or to hold any job for which he or she is qualified, without regard to his age, with special emphasis on that age group ranging from 45 to 65 years.

"If the advertisement could not conceivably include applicants between the ages of 45 and 65 years, it may be considered that the advertisement discriminates against applicants because of age."

Saanich To Meet On Sewerage Plan

Saanich council will hold a special meeting Friday at 4:30 p.m. to consider the proposed sewerage utility.

The issue was tabled at a recent council meeting and referred to a special council meeting which was to have been held last Friday. It was cancelled so more information could be obtained.

The proposal involves wrapping up the individually-financed sewer areas into one common utility, averaging out the varying costs.

Special Sponges Take Work Out of Waxing

By Penny Saver

To me, the pride and joy of every woman's kitchen is the floor. Especially in a large kitchen where there is so much floor to be seen, shiny and polished floors make the whole room look so clean and bright. I wish that there was some way to keep mine glossy all the time without much work at all, as to me, the biggest headache is applying wax. I don't expect to find a dull-proof finish, but I did find an item that brings work time and effort down to a minimum.

The "secret" is special sponges made to fit onto your electric polisher. Simply snap these over the brushes, wax the sponges, and wax away. By this method, wax spreads evenly and smoothly over the entire floor. No more streaks where you may have "missed" by doing it the old way.

These sponge applicators will fit all two-brush polishers. In the package, there are two pairs of snap fasteners. Choose the pair that fits your polisher. Price of the package of reversible sponges and fasteners is 79 cents.

With all the rain that we've been having lately, our car has been getting more than its share of washes. As soon as the clouds disappear and the sun shines, the car looks so dreadfully muddy. In one shop, I found a quick way to do the job. It's a packet of three car washes priced at 29 cents. Add the contents of one envelope to a bucket of water and mix until the water is sudsy. Wash the entire body with a lamb's wool washmitt, a soft towel or sponge. Then, just hose the suds away. If the car is hot, rinse frequently. This leaves the car shiny without wiping. Pick up these car washes today and have the brightest car on your block.

One gadget in this store is designed to save you time. This is a five-way opener. Instead of bending knife-points trying to pry open tight lids, use this. It has two sturdy prongs for lifting hard-to-open jam lids. Another special arm of this item prisms small lids like those on ketchup bottles. Besides these, it opens puncture tins and soft-drink caps. Save your other kitchen utensils with this opener, priced at 79 cents.

You'll save time and work with these items. Give me a call at 382-3131 if you want to know where to find them.

DEAR ABBY...

Baby 'Mix-Up' Not Impossible

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can put my mind at ease and help me with a problem no one else seems willing to help me with. I would like very much to have my son's footprints taken again to compare them with the ones taken at the hospital where he was born. I am not saying for sure that he is not my own child, but I keep thinking that somewhere along the line they could have mixed up my baby with someone else's.

My son is a year old now, and it still bothers me.

I have contacted the hospital where he was born, asking if they would take another set of footprints for comparison now, and they laughed at me and said this was never done. Someone suggested I hire a lawyer. What for? I don't want to sue anyone. I just want to be sure they gave me the right baby.

DEAR TROUBLED: Your request does not strike me as being outlandish. Discuss this with your family doctor. He will not laugh at you. Even though your fears are probably unfounded, the proof you seek is not difficult to obtain.

Your peace of mind is what is important now. PS: Lawyers are "bored" for reasons other than "suing"—they advise one of his legal rights.

DEAR ABBY: First I want to tell you that I have not missed reading a single one of your columns since it started to run in our newspaper. When I go on vacations, I leave instructions with my housekeeper to cut out all the Dear Abby's and save them for me. I only tell you this so you will know how much I respect your advice.

Now for my question: I would like to have your thinking on some extremely important matters, both social and business, but this must be strictly confidential. I don't want any of your secretaries reading my letters. If I send you the money, will you please rent a post office box to receive my letters. I would like to be assured of absolute privacy. Thank you.

DEAR STRICTLY: Save your money. Send your letters via the regular channels, and mark them "Confidential," and you shall have the privacy you seek.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 22 happy years. Our children are in college, which accounts for my wife's being permanently employed.

Last month her boss sent her to Atlantic City for a convention. This is the first time she's ever been out of town without me. She is very attractive and looks younger than her age.

When she returned she told me the convention included many social affairs, and one evening she went to cocktails and supper with a man she had casually met there. I am sure nothing wrong took place, but I am deeply hurt by what I consider to be indiscreet conduct for a married woman. I am sure there were plenty of unattached women she could have gone with. I would like your opinion.

OLD FASHIONED.

DEAR OLD FASHIONED: Before forming negative opinions, talk it over with your wife and determine if she feels her conduct was "indiscreet." Then re-evaluate your judgment.

Confidential to "Mixed Up" in Blightampton: He may be "brilliant," but ask an outsider. No one can offer objective advice about a problem when he is part of the problem.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow in my early fifties. I make my home with my sister and her husband because I am childless and do not like to live alone. I am financially independent and pay my fair share.

My problem: When my sister and her husband are invited to the home of a friend for a dinner party, this is the kind of invitation I get: "Molly and Max want us for dinner and they said to bring Zelda."

When I tell my sister that I don't consider that much of an invitation she says, "Don't be so formal — you know you're welcome." In your judgment is that an invitation?

DEAR ZELDA: A "bring Zelda" invitation is more than most widows who live with their sisters receive, but it's somewhat second-class. I understand your sensitivity, but don't indulge it. Go, and have a good time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S.M.: What one gives is of greater significance than "how much" he gives. No one said it better than Ella Wheeler Wilcox in "True Charity":

"I gave to a beggar from my little store of well-earned gold. He spent the shining ore and came again, still cold and hungry as before. I gave a thought, and through that thought of mine he found himself, the man supreme, divine; fed, clothed and crowned with blessings manifold; and now he begs no more."

DEAR ABBY: I have a very good friend who was married twice. Her first marriage lasted 15 years and ended in divorce. She's been married nearly 10 years to her second husband, and now she is telling her friends and family that she will soon celebrate her "silver wedding anniversary"!

Today is Valentine's Day and here some members of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority's Social and Athletic Club get into the spirit of the sentimental festival by donning aprons and serving women in their families at a mother-and-

A dainty gown of white silk, groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hager of Hayter, Alta. The bride's stepfather, Mr. Campbell, gave her in marriage.

Baskets of gladioli and carnations in red and white tones were at the altar of St. Aidan's United Church for the candle-light ceremony at which Rev. A. G. MacLeod officiated. Organist Miss Marion Dempster accompanied Mrs. Ross Sturgeon who sang "The Wedding Prayer."

Matching gowns of deep red Italian peau de sole, fashioned on empire lines, were worn by the bride's attendants. The gowns featured a slightly flared skirt and elbow-length sleeves with ruffled cuffs. Their self-fabric cinched bodices were edged with veils and they wore pearl necklaces as jewelry. Red roses, nestled in white chrysanthemums, were in their bouquets.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Joe Pagurto, and bridesmaids were the Misses Sylvia Campbell, the bride's stepsister, and Myrna Hager, sister of the groom. The bride's cousin, Marjorie Burkholder, was junior bridesmaid.

Terry Merriman, Edmonton, was best man for his brother. Ushering guests to pews married with white satin roses were the groom's brother, Grant Hager; Lyle Campbell, the bride's stepbrother, and Ken Burkholder, her cousin.

The red and white color theme of the wedding was repeated in the decorations at the reception in Odd Fellows Hall. The head table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake, decorated by the bride's aunt, Mrs. E. M. Burkholder. George Haglund proposed the toast to the bride.

The couple will be making their home in Hardisty, following a honeymoon trip touring the southern and mid-western United States. For travelling the new Mrs. Hager chose a two-piece Burgundy wool suit and jade green coat, accented with a white fox collar. Her accessories were in white and black tones. She completed the outfit with the groom's gift of culture pearls and a corsage of white gardenias.

He says I am fine and I shouldn't worry about what to say. By the end of the evening I am sick with fright, nervous, and tied up in knots. How can I get over this feeling? Folks tell me I'm pretty, but that's not enough. Can you help me?

DEAR NERVOUS: If you can write, you can read. And if you can read, you can learn. Read your newspaper and keep up with the current events. That's a beginning. And don't be afraid to speak up.

If your gentleman friend were "ashamed" of you, he would not invite you to be in the company of his friends. Even with your limited education, you are probably a lot brighter than you think you are.

Review of Habits That Make One Prone to Heart Disease

Here are a few tidbits of news, gleaned from here and there, which are important to all of us.

In a fairly recent issue of the "Journal of American Medical Association" Dr. Ray H. Rosenman and associates reported the findings from long-term studies of 3,000 men between the ages of 39 to 59 years.

These studies were concerned with coronary heart disease.

The report included a quick review of those habits and characteristics which make one more prone to heart disease than the average. Here they are:

1. Those suffering from diabetes or high blood pressure.

2. Those who smoke cigarettes excessively.

3. Those who eat much food high in cholesterol and animal fats.

4. Those who do not get enough exercise.

5. Those with family histories of coronary heart disease.

6. Those with high blood lipid levels.

7. Those advanced in years.

8. Those preoccupied with the urgency of time or success.

We can do something about most of the items on that list. Folks cannot do anything about inheritance or the number of years they have lived. However, diabetes and hypertension are being controlled with medication. Reading between the lines, overweight is mentioned. If you eat a diet high in fat and exercise very little, it adds up to too many pounds.

You will notice that the psychological and personality factors are given their due. Strain and stress will get you if you don't watch out. Take it easier, even if you do the same amount of work. Learn to work in a relaxed mood.

Then there is another interesting report. A study of 55,000 men, who are enrolled in the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York indicates that smokers who are physically inactive are three times more apt to have a heart attack than those who smoke and are moderately active. Chances for survival are twice as good if they have been physically active.

Dr. Charles W. Frank of Albert Einstein College said, "Even a little exercise seems to help. We don't have to be physical nuts, but it would help us to get off our bottoms once in a while."

This heart specialist explained that exercise helps in developing an increased number of blood vessels to the heart and between the arteries.

Today exercise is being given an extremely important place in health. If you can't beat it, join it, but in a sensible way. Do not suddenly turn into a weekend athlete or walk two miles when you should only walk one mile, or indulge in strenuous exercises before having your heart and blood pressure checked by your doctor and being given the green light.

IODE Chapter Records Outstanding Service

An outstanding year of service was recorded in the educational report given by Mrs. M. Smith at the annual meeting of Navy League Chapter, IODE, Friday in Eaton's board room.

One of the chapter's main projects is the support of Rainbow Royal Sea Cadet Corps, and Mrs. Smith announced that a bursary of $100 had been presented to one of the cadets. Awards of $50 had been presented to two university students, she continued, and $15 given to assist two more.

She mentioned the chapter had presented book prizes to two students at Central Junior Secondary School for top marks in Canadian history. Books and supplies had been sent to the adopted Hartley Bay School and she added that both schools had received calendars and magazine subscriptions. Total expenditures in this department were $412.50.

As well as books, services convener Mrs. C. Downing mentioned that the Hartley Bay School had also received clothing and sports equipment from this department. All commitments had been met, Mrs. Downing told the meeting that members had given 100 hours for making afghans, quilts, socks, slippers and nursery bags for the municipal chapter.

A large number of books and magazines had been given to the Veterans' Hospital and Rose Manor and hampers had been given to needy families.

To assist the sea cadets, she said, the chapter had also given a small refrigerator for the corps' kitchen. Total disbursements were $302.78.

Treasurer Mrs. F. Nobbs announced that total receipts were $1,049.27. Among the main fund-raising projects, she said, were the IODE Festival, holiday raffle, bingo games, and donations.

Disbursements were $1,269.32 and expenditures included commitments to the provincial, national and municipal funds. The balance remaining, she said, was $493.49.

In Mrs. F. Durick's world affairs report, it was noted that letters had been received from Miss Verna Asprey, a missionary in Thailand. The chapter had sent her a donation of $36.

Other reports were by Echoes secretary Mrs. A. Crossan, standard bearer Mrs. N. Chattell and citizenship, Miss E. Welch. It was reported that the chapter had a membership of 28, with three life members and three new members.

Special guest, municipal regent Miss Christine MacNab, commended the chapter on their reports and the diversity of their work. She also congratulated Mrs. E. Shank, an IODE member for more than 50 years, who will be celebrating her 90th birthday today.

The majority of the 50 years has been with the Navy League Chapter.

Miss MacNab then conducted the installation of officers. Mrs. E. E. Beirnes was re-elected as regent of the chapter, and also serving on the executive are: Mrs. M. Keilbeck, first vice-regent; Mrs. M. Sparkes, second; Mrs. Downing, secretary; Mrs. Nobbs, treasurer; Mrs. M. Smith, educational secretary; Mrs. Crossan, Echoes; Mrs. R. Smilie, services; Mrs. L. Painter, standard bearer; Mrs. T. English, public relations; and Mrs. T. Watt, commonwealth relations.

Lewis-Grist Vows

PRAIRIE WEDDING

A wedding of interest to Victorians took place recently in the immaculate Conception Church, Rivers, Man., when Katherine Therisa Grist, Rivers, exchanged vows with Edward Harold Lewis of Victoria. Rev. E. J. Grist officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Grist, of the Prairie city, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lewis, 612 Frances Avenue, Victoria, who travelled to Rivers for the wedding.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of ligoda styled with an A-line skirt. Dainty appliques of Swiss lace starred the skirt. The fitted bodice featured a rounded neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves. Her chapel train, extending back from the waist, was edged in a tulip design. A floral lace headpiece with clusters of pearls and crystal drops held her five-tier, bouffant cathedral-length veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses, and the groom's gift of a silver cross centred with a diamond was her only jewelry.

Maid of honor Miss Suzanne Harvey and bridesmaid Miss Sharon Latcham were in sleeveless floor-length gowns of petal pink and turquoise silk. The empire-line gowns were styled with overlays of nylon organza. Cathedral trains extended back from the waistlines. Headpieces were self-fabric, and they carried two pink long-stemmed roses and ferns in their bouquets.

Donald Leadbetter, a former Victorian, was best man and guests were ushered by Michael Horiachka.

At the reception held in the Legion hall, the bride's table was centred with a round, five-tier wedding cake. At each end of the table was candelabra with five petal pink candles. Lee Grist proposed the toast to his cousin, Miss Elaine Pruden was in charge of the guest book.

For travelling on honeymoon to Edmonton, where the couple is now making their home, the new Mrs. Lewis chose a two-piece wool suit of black tweed with a matching cape. Red and black accessories and a corsage of red feathered carnations complemented her ensemble.

ESQUIMALT COMMITTEE

Fire-Police Link Probe Still in Inquiry Stage

Keep Golf Shots On Beam

Snowmobiles and golf carts can't be operated at night unless equipped with motorcycle-type headlights and tail lights, brakes and a muffler for internal combustion engines, the provincial cabinet has decided.

The controls were extended through amendments to the Motor Vehicles Act regulations. In addition, snowmobiles (over 40 inches in width) and snow vehicles (under 40 inches) can't be operated on roads at all unless they have a special permit from the local police.

The regulations require the snowmobile owner to obtain a permit from the nearest RCMP officer for highway driving and the officer can include various limitations in the permit — including such things as whether the vehicle can be operated at night.

In cases where the snowmobiles are to be operated on municipal roads, a similar permit must be obtained from the chief of police.

In other amendments, the order-in-council requires safety glass installations in "camper" units built onto vehicles, permits trailers under one-ton to be connected to a vehicle by bumper hitches and rules out the high flaring "butterfly" handlebars for motorcycles, requiring handlebars to be less than 15 inches above the seat.

CARELESS DRIVERS

Fined $40 each for careless driving when they appeared in traffic court Monday.

Robert Irish, 2310 Lee; Henry Schmidt, 765 Arden Road; and John Singh, 1314 Finlayson.

Fined After Check

A man stopped in a city police road safety check Friday night pleaded guilty to driving while disqualified when he appeared in court Saturday. James Kwach, 1250 Tattersall, was fined $100. He was arrested after officers asked for his licence in the check at Esquimalt and Tyee Roads.

Esquimalt's fire committee, probing the joint police-fire structure, is still at the "inquiry stage," chairman Gerald Horne told Esquimalt council Monday night.

He said the committee still had two or more meetings to go before any recommendations would be made on whether to continue the integrated system. Questionnaires on the paid volunteer fire system have been sent to 20 fire departments in the province. The response has so far been excellent, said Coun. Horne. The committee has received 12 completed questionnaires.

The committee spent four hours at a closed meeting last week discussing the paid volunteer system and other possible solutions to Esquimalt's fire issue, said Coun. Horne.

PAID SYSTEM

A special fire committee meeting with city fire chief Eric Simmons, members of the Esquimalt police commission and a force officer will be held in camera Feb. 6 to discuss pros and cons of the paid volunteer system.

Coun. Horne said recommendations to council on the police-fire situation will probably result from further meetings.

Council also transferred title of two lots totalling $10,500 in the Rockheights subdivision to new owners. Fourteen of 27 lots have been sold since phase six of the development, opened six months ago.

In other business, council

● voted to send freshman councillor James Bell as Esquimalt representative to a national civil defence conference at Arran, Ont., April 17 to 20.

● adopted a zoning bylaw to switch the old Island Weavers property at 220 Esquimalt Road from industrial to multiple dwelling, despite previous protest from present owners, the contracting firm of Dillabaugh and Loney.

● received a commendation from the Esquimalt Association of Women Electors for the past year's council work.

● approved the 1967 budget of the Capital Region Planning Board, including Esquimalt's share of $3,268, up $688 from the $2,580 paid last year by Esquimalt. Total sum paid by all the municipalities has been hiked to $38,000 in the 1967 budget up $3,000 from last year.

Wife Beats Devil

ENNA, Sicily (Reuters) — A 43-year-old woman told an investigating magistrate Monday she slew her husband with 18 axe blows because he had been trying to kill her with black magic. Every night for the last three years he had lit seven candles and prayed to the devil to let her die or go mad, she said.

Obstructing Police Brings 2-Month Term

A youth who obstructed policemen in what officers called "a near riot" outside a Broad Street dance hall early Sunday was jailed for two months Monday.

Gerald Harvey, 19, of 46 South Turner pleaded guilty when he appeared in central court.

Officers were called to the 1300 block Broad to break up a fight and had arrested two youths when Harvey kept interfering and shouting, despite three warnings, testimony indicated.

He was given a concurrent five-day term after pleading guilty to being a minor in possession of liquor. Officers found him with three bottles of liquor when checked outside the Government Street liquor store last month, court was told.

Harvey's criminal record includes convictions for being unlawfully at large, for theft and for indecent assault.

DISTURBANCE

One of the youths involved in the fight which brought police to the scene was fined $50 when he pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance.

"You made a real nuisance of yourself," Magistrate Ostler told Joseph Lawrence, 20, of 1427 Taunton.

The other youth involved in the fracas was scheduled to appear in juvenile court.

A street fight in the same block early Saturday cost one of the participants $25 when he appeared in court Saturday.

Gerald Zaleschuk of 430 Superior, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance.

Central Bargaining Good Idea But Far Away, Says IWA Man

Centralized labor-management bargaining in Canada is a good idea.

But a Victoria union leader said "a lot of work must be put into it" before this day arrives.

Murray Drew, president of the International Woodworkers of America here, was commenting on weekend statements in Vancouver by Dr. H. D. Woods, a McGill professor and chairman of the federal government's task force on industrial relations.

Dr. Woods said "there are reasons to believe that centralized bargaining would be in the national interest" but it would require changes in union and management practices.

Mr. Drew said the government must have known of Dr. Woods' opinions because, four years ago, he was saying the same thing at the Labour College of Canada in Montreal.

MARK TIME

At that time, said Mr. Drew, the argument was put by some union leaders of where the "norm" should be — should

B.C., for example, mark time on wages while the rest of the country catches up?

(The latest figures on manufacturing industry wages show B.C. leading with $2.76 an hour followed by Ontario with $2.36. B.C. also had the lowest weekly hours — 37.8.)

"This would be most unfair to B.C., especially so because of the attitude of some premiers such as 'smallwood' of Newfoundland where he has denied the right of labor to attain a decent wage," said Mr. Drew.

He referred specifically to Newfoundland's decertification of IWA loggers in 1959 and the recent law stopping a hospital strike.

BARGAINING

Centralized bargaining would "only be practical" with the complete co-operation of governments, labor and management.

There would also have to be: A drive in those parts of Canada where "individuals are not making a living wage" to bring them up to the B.C. level;

One Labour Relations Act for the whole country, or all of the separate acts in union with one another.

There are 11 jurisdictions in labor-management relations at present — the 10 provinces, covering the bulk of companies and workers, and the federal level, taking in certain industries such as shipping, railways and docks.

The division of jurisdiction was touched on at the International Brotherhood of Teamsters' convention last year.

TEAMSTERS

One resolution said the purpose of the teamsters is "to bring union wages, hours and conditions to the men and women of North America who labor for a living" and this purpose "is no different whether the activities be in the United States or Canada."

Then the resolution added: "In Canada, Teamsters work under both national and provincial labor laws which make it difficult indeed to achieve the purposes outlined above."

... KIERNAN

bag" when seeking aid for the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, the hydro-electric program and the proposed new crossing of Burrard Inlet, he said.

"We say this is a pork-barrel approach to politics and this is the sort of thing that is weakening Confederation. Let's face up to it and correct the situation."

"This isn't beating Ottawa over the head. If we're to feel that we are equal partners we must be treated equally and we should not have to go down to Ottawa on bended knee to plead for fair consideration."

STATEMENT READ

Then, to stress the importance, he read the following statement to the legislature to summarize the government's position:

"Perhaps it is time for the federal government to appoint a minister of provincial affairs to be responsible to see that national programs are equitably applied."

"There is a further factor that has nothing at all to do with money and my comments here are made only with the kindest of intentions, for we want Canada, all of Canada, to remain united, to grow, prosper and play its part for good in this world of the 20th century."

"We are concerned that the traditional cost of arms was being surreptitiously removed from the places it so long occupied in the national postal services and elsewhere."

"We have always found the Queen's English a satisfactory means of communication and while we respect the linguistic abilities of bilingual people, that respect is extended to many languages for our citizens come from many lands."

"We see no reason, with all due respect, for requiring any second language in this part of Canada in order that any person shall exercise his full rights as a citizen."

"We believe, Mr. Speaker, that Canada will grow and prosper if we are all prepared to make our contribution and if we are prepared to each respect the rights and traditions of the other."

"It must be clearly understood that we will always be prepared to make our fair contribution to Canada but we cannot accept the progressive erosion of our rights or our traditions, for the name British Columbia is not without meaning."

Wilson Treks To Bonn For ECM Talks

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson arrives in this West German capital tonight for one of the toughest stages on his trek through Western Europe to present his case for Britain's joining the Common Market.

Former chancellor Ludwig Erhard was a strong supporter of Britain's entry in the organization, but he stood no chance against French President de Gaulle's opposition.

Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger is making an effort to be nicer to de Gaulle than Erhard was. Doubts are often expressed in Bonn that Wilson really wants Britain to get into the Common Market.

Other issues make the Common Market talks more difficult.

Under agreement, West Germany buys British goods to offset the damage caused Britain's balance of international payments through the expense of keeping troops in Germany. When the current agreements expire March 31, Britain wants these purchases raised to almost $265,000,000 from this year's $150,000,000. So far the West Germans are offering only about $38,000,000 plus an additional sum to be set as low as possible.

RECEIVED PROMISES

Wilson has presented his case so far in Rome, Paris and Brussels. He received promises of full Italian support from Premier Aldo Moro and of Belgian backing from Premier Paul Van Den Boeynants. But the British leader failed to win the support of de Gaulle, who would only promise to consult with France's Common Market partners when they meet in April.

The British say Wilson does not intend to make a hard sell in Bonn, or to try to isolate de Gaulle by getting the other five members of the Common Market to gang up on him. All he is doing, they say, is to explain Britain's difficulties and to try to make up his mind whether to apply for membership—when he is sure that there will be no repeat of de Gaulle's 1963 blackball.

Wilson is expected to point out that West Germany's surplus in world trade comes largely from its sales to Britain and other countries of the European Free Trade Association. Of these, Denmark and Norway, plus Ireland, probably would follow Britain into the Common Market. Sweden, Austria and Finland would seek some way of associating themselves with it. The result could be a considerable advantage to West German exporters of industrial goods.

BARGE FLIP SPARKS BIG LAWSUIT

A barge which turned upside down in Tahsis Harbor, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, is the subject of a weighty lawsuit which opened in Victoria Law Courts Monday.

The Tahsis Co. Ltd., owners of an extensive sawmill operation at Tahsis Inlet, claimed in Appeal Court $153,146 for loss and damage caused by the overturning barge.

Vancouver Tug Boat Co. denied allegations of negligence in delivery of the barge and appealed a Supreme Court decision in favor of the Tahsis company.

HOME GARDEN

Snowdrop Planting Takes Plan

By HILDA BEASTALL

Some plants thrive on treatment which is detrimental to others, and this is a fortunate fact to be used with advantage by gardeners.

Now, while we are enjoying this year's long display period of winter-aconites (Eranthis), Snowdrops (Galanthus) and winter-crocuses (Crocus species), we should start planting them exactly where we want them another year.

So often these small treasures of winter stray from their original location, popping up in the most unlikely spots where they contribute little to the main picture.

It is comforting to know that with careful handling these small bulbs will suffer no setback if they are dug now and moved. There is far less risk of losing the bulbs than when they are planted dry in September or October, at the time we plant the larger spring flowering bulbs.

The reason lies in the small size of winter blooming bulbs. They are dug commercially when their foliage has matured, often in early June. Ideal planting time is within a month of digging, but few gardeners are prepared to put in bulbs during July.

LITTLE BULBS

This means the little bulbs lose their small store of moisture during the warm summer days and have deteriorated by fall planting time.

To move the aconite, snowdrop and crocus bulbs now, a small sized shovel is ideal for lifting groups of a kind with plenty of soil. The bulbs may be four to six inches down, unless planted last year when they are more likely to be only two to three inches deep.

Have holes of suitable size ready to receive each group of bulbs without separating or otherwise disturbing them. The soil from the new holes can be used to fill the spots from which the groups were taken.

Make each group firm in the soil, then stand back and admire your handiwork—little bulbs in full bloom just where you want them.

1,000 Attend Witness Rally

Nearly 1,000 Jehovah's Witnesses from many parts of southern Vancouver Island attended a circuit rally in S. J. Willis Junior Secondary School auditorium Saturday.

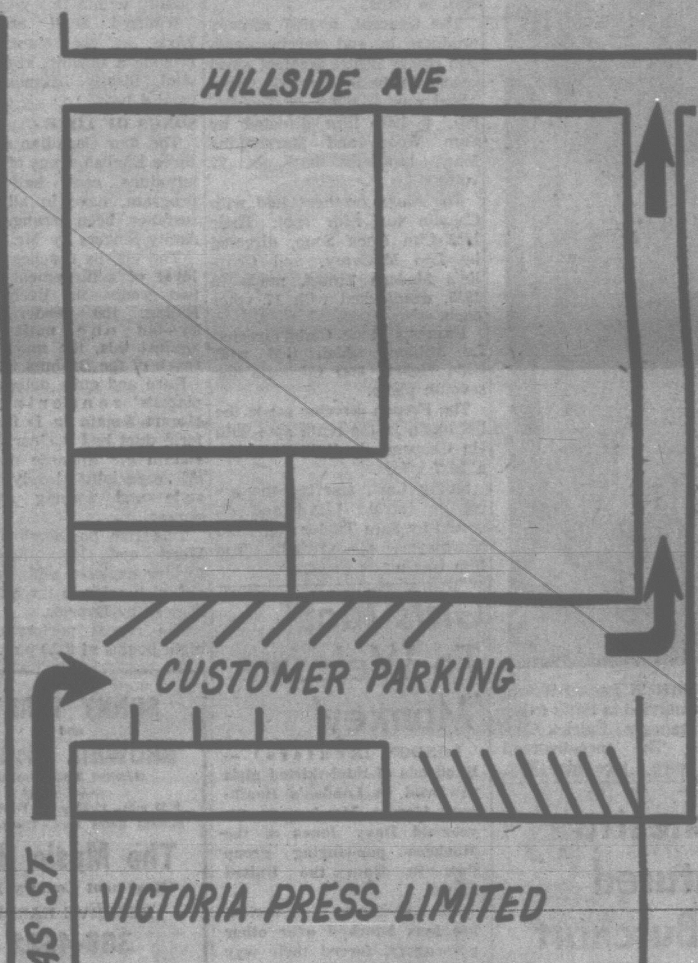

Arnold W. MacNamara flew out from headquarters in Toronto to address the meeting and showed colored slides of witness activities in Canada.

"The auditorium was so crowded we had to rent many of the congregation on the platform," said Pastor Clifford Roberts of Victoria.

Homer and Jethro Replaced by Lester

Recording stars Homer and Jethro have cancelled their scheduled week-long appearance at the Victoria International '67 Auto Show.

The recording artists will be replaced by Broadway and TV comic Jerry Lester, show officials announced today.

Appearing with Lester will be ventriloquist Clifford Guest and the previously scheduled entertainers Ricky Mann, accordionist and acrobatic juggler Carell Keath.

Show officials said one member of the Homer and Jethro team (they were uncertain which), had an ear operation last week. Doctors would not permit him to fly and cancellation was unavoidable.

Producer Mickey Levine said Mr. Lester will be more than a replacement. He is internationally known as a stand-up comic due to appearances on the Ed Sullivan Show, tours with Liberace and Danny Kaye and a role in the Broadway hit "A Funny Thing Happened to Me on the Way to the Forum."

Jerry Lester has appeared three times at the Cave in Vancouver and also has been a guest on the Johnnie Carson Show.

It was also announced today that local singer Jock Dunbar will be master of ceremonies for the show and will sing some of his favorites. Highway Minister Gagliardi was to appear at the opening show at Memorial Arena tonight.

The auto show doors will be open daily this week between 1 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Show times are 4:30, 7:15 and 10:15 p.m. daily.

Chaplin Film Rated Number One Comedy

OTTAWA (CP) — Charlie Chaplin's The Gold Rush, made 42 years ago, won unanimous choice as the greatest comedy film ever made in a poll of critics in 40 countries, the Canadian film archives reported Monday.

The 1925 motion picture about the rush to mine gold in the Yukon collected 40 votes in a poll conducted by the archives for the centennial commission.

A selection of the top-rated comedy films will be presented during a film festival here starting April 1.

Old-time comedies took the bulk of the honors. Only two pictures in the top 10 were made after the Second World War.

They are Les Vacances de M. Hulot, with Jacques Tati as star and director, made in 1953, and Kind Hearts and Coronets, a 1949 British film starring Alec Guinness and directed by Robert Hamer. The French film ranked fourth with 18 votes, the British film tied for seventh with 15 votes.

The General, a 1927 comedy produced by and starring deadpan comic Buster Keaton, stood second in the poll with 33 votes. Third was A Night at the Opera, a 1935 film directed by Sam Wood and starring the Marx brothers that got 22 votes.

The Marx brothers tied with Chaplin for fifth spot. Their 1933 film Duck Soup, directed by Leo McCarey, and Chaplin's Modern Times, made in 1936, deadlocked with 17 votes each.

France's Rene Clair directed Le Million, which tied with Kind Hearts and Coronets for seventh place.

The French director made the list again in the ninth spot with Un Chapeau de Paille d'Italie, a 1927 effort.

Safety Last, starring the acrobatic Harold Lloyd and directed by Sam Taylor and Fred Newmeyer, placed 10th. The film was made in 1923.

Girls Riot To Welcome 'Monkey'

LONDON (Reuters) — Hundreds of mini-skirted girls ran wild at London's Heathrow Airport Monday as 21-year-old Davy Jones of the Monkees pop-singing group flew in from the United States.

The 700-strong mob shrieking fans knocked over other passengers, forced their way through customs barriers and battled with policemen.

Some of them jumped over a railing onto the roof of the terminal and stood perched and screaming on a 12-inch ledge, 40 feet above the ground.

When Jones, the only British-born member of the four-man group, left the aircraft he was driven in a police car to the other side of the airport.

The girls then tried to storm their way through the landing field's gates guarded by 12 policemen. Police helmets went flying and many girls were bruised and without shoes and hats when the gates were finally slammed.

One pregnant woman was knocked down by the stampeding fans.

The concerts, on eight consecutive Tuesday evenings beginning July 4, will feature the Butchart Gardens Pops Orchestra. Conductor will be Howard Denike and the orchestra will consist of members of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

Music to be played will be strictly popular, consisting of a great extent of Broadway show, waltzes and semi-classical numbers.

A male and female vocal soloist will be engaged to appear at each concert throughout the series.

In the event of any concert being rained out on the Tuesday, it will be transferred to the following Sunday evening, according to word from owner-manager Ian Ross.

Concert times will be 8:30 and the public will once more be able to enjoy picnic suppers on the lawns as a prelude to the evening.

There will be no additional charge for admission to the Gardens.

Brahms Works Difficult, Enchanting

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The love song waltzes of Brahms (Liebesslieder) are among the most idyllic and enchanting in the entire repertoire of music for small vocal and instrumental ensembles.

They are also intimate in style, imbued with the glow of 19th-century German romanticism, the lilt of Vienna and difficult.

GUEST ARTIST
In their presentation Monday night—to be repeated tonight—by the Amity Singers and guest artists Robin Wood and Winifred Scott, under the direction of Rodney Webster, they were considerably successful.

Mr. Webster has looked deeply into Brahms's nature, his intention and his personal attitude toward these two cycles encompassing the composer's affection for the vocal ensemble, the piano duet and the Viennese waltz.

He has captured the intimate character, the closely woven nature of the ensemble in which the piano duet is always an equal, sometimes a dominant partner.

The clear, fastidious conducting style he has developed and his sensitive feeling for phrase and shading result in an effect of grace and, at times an aquatint delicacy, but this tends to wash out at moments.

The 12 girls and 11 men of the Amity Singers produce a youthful, refined and true sound and when they unleash a forte it has excellent texture, is warm and well blended.

The blend is less satisfactory in pianissimo passages and it seems that in subduing the male voices to the ensemble concept, vitality both of tone and enunciation is weakened.

Vocal solo parts taken by Jill Paver, soprano, Pamela May, mezzo, Robert Hall, tenor, and David Conrad, bass, were indicative of the fine individual quality within this group.

Winifred Scott and Robin Wood as the piano duetists provide a flowing, rhythmically vital, ideally balanced instrumental part.

SONGS OF LOVE
The four Canadian songs and three English songs of love that introduce each half of the program, have in all but one instance, been arranged for the Amity Singers by Mr. Webster.

The chorus reaches its finest level of achievement in these two groups—the lively Donkey Riding, the tender Passing By—but one must balance against this the much greater reach of the Brahms works.

Rare and quite delightful, the pianists' rendering of the Mozart Sonata in D for piano-forte duet had a clear elegance and in the Andante movement an especially lovely singing style and soaring sense of phrase.

This fine partnership of Mr. Wood and Miss Scott was further explored with brilliance and rich color in three Slavonic Dances by Dvorak.

The repeat performance tonight begins at 8:30 p.m.

Made-in-Canada Actress Back After U.K. Success

Recipient of the 1966 Tyrone Guthrie Award, Roberta Maxwell is a "made in Canada" actress who is well on her way in a career that promises a rosy future.

She will be seen as the wealthy young widow, Olivia, in the Stratford Festival production of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night at the Royal Theatre next Wednesday.

This was the role she portrayed in last season's highly successful production at Stratford.

In The Government Inspector which the company will present on its first night in Victoria, Miss Maxwell will play Maria.

Toronto-born, she began acting while still in high school, appearing professionally at the Crest Theatre and on CBC television programs.

TWO YEARS
After two years with the company she went to England and appeared with various repertory groups, including the Ipswich and Cheltenham Companies.

Seasons of feature roles at the Crest, the Neptune in Halifax and Manitoba Theatre Centre occupied her until her return to the Stratford Festival last year.

Landmore Buys Galloway Herd
CLARESHOLM, Alta. (CP) — Rear-Admiral William Landmore of Nova Scotia has purchased the 17-head herd of purebred Galloway beef cattle owned by Orrin Hart of Clareholm.

Purchase price for the herd was not disclosed. The cattle will leave Clareholm for Nova Scotia about Feb. 22.

The cattle, imported by Mr. Hart from Scotland 11 years ago, are noted for their thick, long hair and ability to withstand cold.

Rear-Admiral Landmore retired from the navy after he was relieved of his post as commander of the maritime command in July, 1966. He was an outspoken critic of Defence Minister Heley's unification program for the armed forces.

IN THE SPRING a young swan's fancy lightly turns and turns and turns. This swan in an Orlando, Florida, park must be in love this Valentine's Day. At least she seems to be running around in circles.

Lloyd Gags Still Provoke Laughter Across Campuses

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I lost a generation by staying off the screen," says Harold Lloyd, "so I decided to see if I could still make young people laugh."

He can. That has been abundantly proved with showings of Harold Lloyd's Funny Side of Life at university campuses throughout the U.S. the laughter demonstrated that the 73-year-old comic's way with a gag remains as sure fire as it was during his heyday on the screen in the 1920s and 1930s.

"Yes, it has been just splendid; I'm delighted with the reaction," remarked Lloyd, who has never lost his boyish zest for everything he does.

"I went out with a film that included a half-hour of prologue, including some of the gags from various pictures, and then the whole of The Freshman. That was a satire of college life which I made in 1925, and it still seems to apply to-day."

"The picture has shown at about 12 universities, and I have appeared at five of them. I run the picture and then I hold a symposium. I encourage the students to speak their minds. My goodness, they certainly do."

LAST OF AN ERA

With the death of Buster Keaton and Stan Laurel and the move to Europe of Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd has become the last star of the screen's great era of comedy to remain on the Hollywood scene. Except for an abortive return in Preston Sturges' Mad Wednesday in 1950, he hasn't appeared in a movie since Professor Beware in 1933.

Lloyd has proved as active in retirement as he ever was during his career as producer-star. One of his major activities is national chairmanship of the 22 Shrine hospitals.

He also immerses himself in hobbies. Right now he is going through his stereo period—music and photography.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our three-year-old fox terrier, Jitney, keeps swallowing so much it worries us. The doctor says she has enlarged tonsils but has not suggested they be removed. Is there a reason? Is it dangerous to have them removed?—O.E.

DEAR O.E.: Better ask Jitney's doctor why. Undoubtedly he would have recommended surgery if he felt it advisable. The primary danger from a tonsillectomy is, as in humans, the possibility of post-operative hemorrhage.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Mighty Mouser has taken a fancy to catnip and so, of course, I indulge him regularly. A friend claims to be serious when he says that Mighty might become hooked on the stuff. I've never believed anything this joker has told me before. Should I stop this time?—Y.G.

DEAR Y.G.: Catnip is an addictive drug, though the number of cats that actually become addicts is remarkably small. Just in case Mighty might be one of these you should, perhaps, begin to gradually withdraw his supply.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Cadwell, my pet chicken, broke his leg last month. It didn't heal too bad except that it's crooked and he has a limp when he walks. When he grows clear up I was going to mate him with two hens I have. Do you think this leg has ruined him for that sort of thing, or not?—F.R.

DEAR F.R.: It should take more than an old broken leg to crack Cadwell's spirit when mating time rolls around. While his sprinting time may be cut considerably, his pick-up should be as good as ever. Hens don't run far anyway.

DEAR DR. MILLER: When moving 200 miles, how is it best to take two Siamese cats, one 14, the other 12? It will take four or five hours to drive by car.—S.L.

DEAR S.L.: If you try to make that trip in four hours, the cat's chances of survival will be poor—and so will yours. However, these two can hold together for the longer period required, provided they (1) have passed their physicals; (2) have plenty of rest and fluids the previous week; and (3) are given a long-acting tranquilizer by the doctor, just as they leave town. They will be safest (most secure, and secure-feeling) confined together in a semi-darkened, extra-large carrier.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We badly want a puppy but have no idea what kind. Where is the best place to pick out one?—U.R.

DEAR U.R.: Best bet? A dog show. A puppy, any breed, is practically irresistible, but here you could see just how they turn out and can develop a reasonably good picture of environmental requirements and personality. This way you are less likely to pick a dog simply because it is cute and more likely to choose the proper fit, mentally and physically, for your home.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions to select to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 25-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and all of the second question a Standard Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to April Corones, age 12, of Kansas City, Missouri, for her question:

What material is inside a battery cell?

There are many types of battery cells but all of them are made to give electrical power. For everyday jobs, we depend on the storage battery and the dry cell battery. A storage battery is kept inside an automobile to start the engine. It is a sizeable box, very sturdy and topped with a row of round knobs. You will find a dry-cell battery inside a flashlight. It is a small, can-shaped object, rather heavy for its size.

Batteries work because certain chemicals interact with each other. This chemical activity creates a special kind of energy that can be turned into electricity. The materials in a battery cell are chemicals, the special chemicals that work together to make electrical energy. As they interact, they change and use up their chemical energy. Then the battery is dead.

The first battery cell was made in the 1770's. It was a stack of metal saucers separated from each other by rags soaked in salty water. No one at the time knew why this group of chemicals created electricity. But the old trick still works and now we know why. We have made it stronger and more simple and improved it to invent a whole assortment of different batteries for different jobs.

The metal saucers used in the first battery were electrodes. The salty liquid was an electrolyte. Every battery must have two opposite electrodes, one with a positive charge and one with a negative. Every battery must have an electrolyte. And the chemical electrodes must be in contact with the chemical electrolyte. The role of each ingredient in a battery can be played by several different chemicals. Usually a storage battery has a positive electrode of carbon and a negative electrode of zinc. The two plates sit in a liquid electrolyte, most likely a weak solution of sulphuric acid.

The dry cell was invented 100 years ago. Its two electrodes are in contact with a paste electrolyte. Its negative electrode is the can-shaped container, usually made of zinc. It is lined with paper material soaked in sal ammoniac and zinc chloride. The positive electrode is a carbon rod buried in the middle of the stuffing. The stuffing, of course, is the paste electrolyte. It is most likely a mixture of sal ammoniac and zinc chloride, manganese oxide, carbon and graphite. These strange chemicals are powdered, mixed together and moistened with water.

A battery gets its go from acid chemicals. A normal atom, of course, has a definite number of orbiting electrons. This is true of the atoms in an acid. An acid usually dissolves in water and when this happens, its atoms tend to misplace some of their electrons. They become electrically charged ions, some with extra positive and some with extra negative charges.

Columbia Dam Costs Termed Big Blunder

By GLEN ALLEN

An opposition MLA Monday loosed a flood of criticism on the planners of the Columbia River dam projects.

"The financial blunder on Columbia costs was a tragedy of immense proportions," said Randolph Harding (NDP-Revelstoke-Slocan).

And he charged the "tragedy" did not stop there. Mr. Harding said social and recreational aspects of the projects had been ignored.

He said the "story" on the dams' financing "sold to the people of British Columbia is going to cost hundreds of millions.

CONSTRUCTION

"The story was there would be a surplus of $53 million after all construction costs had been paid.

"Now the difference between total income and cost to 1971 shows a deficit of $137 million."

"And you still have two years to go before Mica is completed."

Mr. Harding said the government claimed the increased costs were due to the federally imposed 11 per cent tax on construction.

AGREEMENT

"But the British Columbia agreement on the Columbia was signed after the imposition of the 11 per cent tax," he said, directing his remarks to Water Resources Minister Ray Wiliston.

Mr. Harding said the "tragedy" involved was not only that payments from the Americans ($273 million) would fall short of building the dams but that "costs have accelerated to the point where recreational aspects are not being looked after.

SPAWNING GROUNDS

"Over 90 per cent of spawning grounds along the Arrow Lakes will be destroyed," he said. "And fine winter pasture (for wildlife) is going down the drain."

Mr. Harding said "people are being made to leave the homes where they have lived many years."

He charged that no plans had been made for the establishment of secondary industry in the affected areas and that "huge quantities of timber" are being indiscriminately destroyed.

ARRANGEMENTS

He called treaty financing arrangements and planning "a monument to the lack of foresight."

Mr. Harding said that following the expropriation of B.C. Electric — "something we forced you to do" — West Kootenay Light and Power should be "brought under public ownership."

Liquor Blamed For Fatal Car Plunge

HOPE (CP) — A coroner's inquest Monday showed an intoxicated driver was at the wheel of a car that plunged 1,300 feet into the Fraser Canyon near here Dec. 18, killing its four occupants.

Coroner R. D. Morrison conducted the inquest into the deaths of Myron Janicki, 20; Warren Francis King, 23; both of Mission; Miles Stanford Hanson, 18, of Prince George; and Phyllis Frances Hill-Tout, 21, of Haney.

The four died when the car in which they were riding apparently went out of control and left the highway after sideswiping another car.

Coroner Morrison said the vehicle, at the time of collision, was on the wrong side of the road and did not have its lights on.

He said it is presumed either King, with a blood alcohol reading of 0.05 per cent, or Janicki, with a level of 0.03 per cent, was driving the car. These two were in the front seat.

The car and bodies were not found for several days after the accident.

Girl-Attacker Held in Jail For Sentence

A man who grabbed and knocked down a 13-year-old girl but let her go when she screamed will be held in jail until he is sentenced Friday.

Richard Nelson, 27, of 3937 Laseelles, was remanded in custody after pleading guilty to assault when he appeared in central court Monday.

Sanwich detective Charles Truett told the court Nelson was in his car parked on Lochside Drive Jan. 27 when the girl passed by on her way home from school.

After she refused to take a ride in his car, the accused grabbed her, knocking her to the ground, but jumped back in his car and fled when she kicked and screamed.

The girl noted the car licence number, court was told. Nelson's lawyer pointed out there was no evidence of physical injury in the incident.

"There are more ways to hurt a 13-year-old girl than by beating her," replied Magistrate Oatler in remanding Nelson in custody.

Protest Pause Urged

Douglas Scores
U.S. Over Viet

OTTAWA (CP) — Vietnam dominated debate in the Commons Monday with External Affairs Minister Martin urging restraint of Canadian criticism against the United States bombing of North Vietnam.

NDP Leader Douglas countered with an emotional appeal for a strong Canadian protest and demanded a halt in Canadian arms sales to the U.S. unless there is a guarantee they will not be sent to Vietnam.

Bryce Mackasey (L.—Montreal Verdun) followed with an even more emotional denunciation of Mr. Douglas, accusing him of anti-Americanism and "nothing more than plain demagoguery."

The exchanges came as the House completed its six-day debate on Finance Minister Sharp's supplementary budget introduced in December. Budget debates are traditionally the vehicle for a wide range of topics.

Today the MPs resume study of a government bill to set up a deposit insurance corporation designed to insure individual deposits of up to $20,000 in banks and trust companies.

HAS NO EFFECT

Mr. Martin said the government has taken no public position on bombing of North Vietnam because there is not much chance it could be stopped as the result of an appeal from Canada.

He saw the bombing as the key to resolving the Vietnam conflict "but there are other actions and responsibilities which must also be fitted into the total pattern of steps towards a peaceful settlement."

"I suggest it would be self-destructive, self-defeating, if our public statements... were to have the effect of slamming doors instead of opening them, of closing off potentially useful dialogues instead of stimulating and nurturing the confidential exchange of viewpoints," Mr. Martin said.

The minister said the time is ripe for the International Control Commission comprising Poland, India and Canada to help in bringing the Vietnam war to an end.

Mr. Martin said Canada was not always able to say publicly what it is doing behind the scenes to promote peace in the war-torn country. Commitments had been made "to the parties involved in this matter" and if they were broken "our efforts would not be respected or trusted."

Mr. Martin said there had been criticism that Canadian-made arms sold to the U.S. were being used in Vietnam. But the arms were sent to the U.S. under a 1959 defence-sharing agreement with the approval of all sections of the Commons and of the people of Canada.

Mr. Douglas said the war is the greatest moral issue of our times.

"The time for quiet diplomacy is past; the time has come to speak out."

The NDP leader said he questioned Mr. Martin's courage in not spelling out his convictions that the bombing end and a settlement be reached.

'DEEPER IN QUAGMIRE' SAY 3 U.S. SENATORS

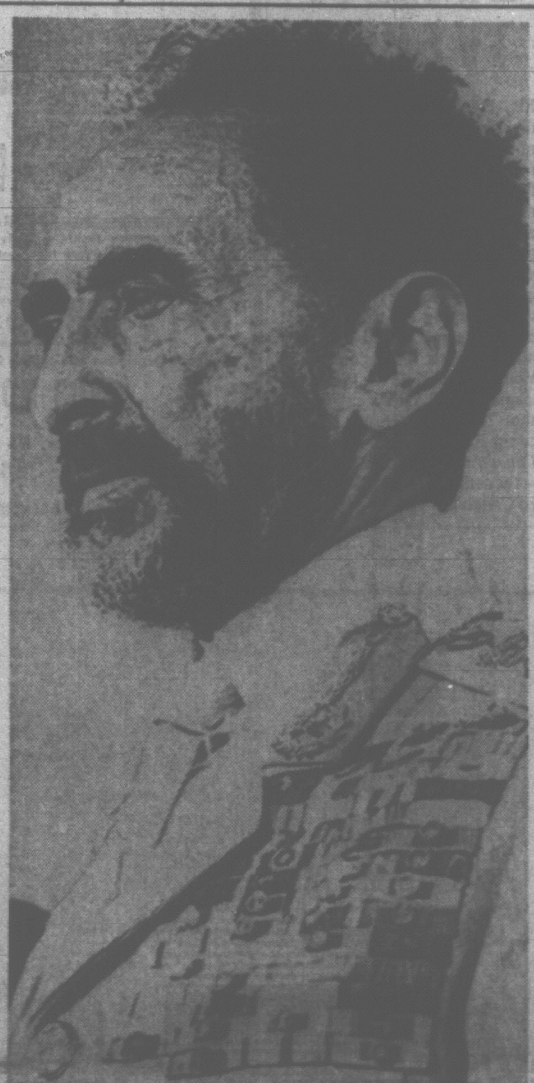

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Three United States senators Monday criticized resumption of American bombing attacks against North Vietnam.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D—Ark.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said: "I regret this very much. I'm sorry to hear it."

"I regret that Americans have not been able to take this matter to the peace table."

Sen. Wayne Morse (D—Ore.), said: "We should not have started the bombing in the first place and therefore we shouldn't continue it."

Sen. Ernest Gruening (D—Alaska), said: "Our military commitment in Southeast Asia is an incredible piece of folly. I think the resumption of bombing is bad. We haven't accomplished anything in the two years of bombing except to stiffen resistance, prolong the war and get us deeper and deeper into the quagmire."

Kiernan Faces Counter Charge

By JOHN MIKA

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan today was to be told in the legislature that he is one of the weaknesses of Confederation which he has complained about.

The strong counter to his Monday statement charging discrimination against B.C. through "pork barrel" federal policies was to be made in the budget debate by Allan Williams (L.—West Vancouver-Howe Sound).

"We're going to answer Mr. Kiernan's complaints that there are weaknesses in Confederation by pointing out he is one of the weaknesses," said Liberal caucus chairman Dr. Pat McGeer this morning.

KEY STATEMENT

"A key statement will be made by Mr. Williams who will be our principal speaker today."

Quebec Blacklisted

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says Canadian teaching organizations plans to blacklist the province of Quebec as a place for teachers to find work. The newspaper says the move is an effort to help striking Quebec teachers.

Dr. McGeer said Mr. Kiernan's recitation of special federal assistance to Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Quebec only proves "that you don't have to have a provincial Liberal government to receive due consideration from Ottawa."

"B.C. is the only province that claims it has not received this consideration and whose fault is that? The B.C. negotiating team, the government itself, so why does it come snivelling on our shoulders?"

CRY BABIES

"They've made us the cry babies of Confederation so how can we expect respect from the rest of Canada after statements like those from Mr. Kiernan?"

The trouble is the B.C. government want to be bossed not leaders."

Dr. McGeer said it was indisputable that B.C. sells more abroad than to the rest of Canada and contributes a great deal to the national economy.

"But that's to the credit of our entrepreneurs and our workers. When it comes to the psychological impact that should be provided by government, it's all zero-zero."

Secret Plan Available For Viet Peace—Wilson

Weeks Of Hope Ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam peace prospects appear at their lowest point in two months today as U.S. bombing of North Vietnam resumed and weeks of optimistic speculation ended.

U.S. officials said peace efforts had receded to their pre-Christmas position.

President Johnson, in announcing the resumption of bombing late Monday, said he had hoped the ceasefire during the Lunar New Year "might lead to some abatement of hostilities and to moves toward peace."

But he said the North Vietnamese has used the pause "for major re-supply efforts of their troops in South Vietnam."

Johnson apparently referred to Sunday night's meeting in London between Soviet Premier Kosygin and British Prime Minister Wilson when he said: "Despite our efforts and those of third parties, no other response has yet come from Hanoi."

Johnson earlier had indicated determination to resume the air war in the absence of any North Vietnamese easing of military activity.

INSISTED ON HALT

But the North Vietnamese insisted on a halt in U.S. bombing and withdrawal of troops before peace talks could get started.

Peace hopes began building up about two months ago when North Vietnamese officials dropped hints negotiations could start if the U.S. bombing was permanently halted.

There have been three truce intervals since December and diplomats had been particularly hopeful that the latest might bring a breakthrough in the quest for a peace formula.

In his White House statement, Johnson said: "The door to peace is and will remain open and we are prepared at any time to go more than halfway to meet any equitable overture from the other side."

Officials reiterated this meant North Vietnam must scale down its military operations if U.S. bombing of the north is to be halted.

'Up Jobless Benefits'

OTTAWA (CP) — Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) says it's time the government increased unemployment insurance rates which have not been raised since 1959.

WAR RAGES AT FULL TILT ON BOTH SIDES OF BORDER

SAIGON (AP) — The air war returned to full swing today on both sides of the border as U.S. fighter-bombers pounded railroads and other supply routes in North Vietnam. Radio Hanoi said two were shot down. U.S. Navy vessels attacked North Vietnamese shipping.

Peking and Pyongyang broadcast pledges of continued support for the Viet Cong from China and North Korea. The messages to the guerrillas were signed by Defence Minister Lin Piao of China and Kim Chang Pong of North Korea.

Pope Disappointed By Ho's Message

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican expressed sadness today over the message President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam sent to Pope Paul.

A comment in the Vatican daily L'Osservatore Romano said that the replies of U.S. President Johnson and Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam to the Pope's latest peace appeals "do not seem to reject the exhortation from the visible head of the church."

It said Ho's reply, however, "does not unfortunately, contain any new elements to furnish hopes for the start, at least now, of negotiations for an honorable end to the sad conflict."

"The latest developments concerning Vietnam are causes of grave and profound sadness," the paper said.

This was the first formal comment from the Vatican on the answers to Johnson, Thieu and Ho to the Pope's pleas last Wednesday that the Lunar New Year truce be prolonged into negotiations.

The paper said that despite setbacks to the Pope's peace efforts he would not give up trying and that no matter how hard and difficult the way might be to peace the church would not be discouraged.

'Small Move' Needed to Start

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson said today there is in existence a secret plan which could bring peace to Vietnam, but he did not identify the participants in such a plan or give any further details.

Speaking in the House of Commons, Wilson said: "There is an initiative—a plan—which could bring peace tomorrow, which requires a very small move to activate all the complicated machinery that would bring us peace."

He said efforts to get Vietnam peace talks started came close to success during the Vietnamese Lunar New Year truce.

But the conditions needed to bring both sides to the conference table were not created during the truce, he said. He listed particularly a North Vietnamese buildup during the ceasefire, which "threatened to create a severe military imbalance."

Wilson said it also made it harder for the Americans to believe that the North Vietnamese leaders wanted to use the truce for a peace effort "rather than for a further effort in war."

Wilson added: "I believe there were moments when this could have been very near."

Wilson went on: "I do not underestimate the renewed dangers that accompany the resumption of fighting; and we must all deeply regret that the Tet period, the period of the Vietnamese New Year, was not utilized to create the conditions that were needed for a move to the conference table."

"In particular, the massive southward movements of troops and supplies in the North, on a scale far greater than in the Christmas, or indeed in many ceasefires, threatened to create a severe military imbalance."

Wilson made his second parliamentary statement on Vietnam in two days. And again he declared: "The road to a solution remains open."

Hanoi Hawks Foil Kosygin Attempt

An authoritative British official said today that Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin sincerely tried to stop the war in Vietnam but failed because of a lack of consensus among Hanoi factions.

"The opportunity is gone and we have to look for another," the official said in disclosing some of the secret manoeuvring in the final hours of Kosygin's eight-day visit and talks with Prime Minister Wilson.

Publicly, Kosygin sided with the North Vietnam position that the United States must end its bombing of North Vietnam unconditionally and permanently before peace talks could begin.

Privately, he agreed with Wilson to try to obtain some reciprocal concessions from Hanoi to compensate for ending of American bombing. It was this hope that Kosygin could persuade Hanoi to modify its position that brought Wilson to Kosygin's hotel suite in a conference Monday at 1 a.m.

It was during that one-hour conference that Wilson learned that Hanoi would not budge, the official said.

The British government thereafter sympathized with President Johnson's decision that he could no longer hold back re-

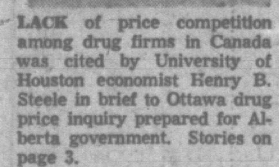

Truce Used To Aid Troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The North Vietnamese used 3,770 trucks and vessels to rush at least 25,000 tons of ammunition and equipment toward South Vietnam during the United States bombing pause, the defence department said today.

This was calculated to be enough to support a 10,000-man division in combat for 250 days, a spokesman said.

'Pork-Barrel' Policy Weakens Canada

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

The provincial government Monday gave a rough outline of its formula for strengthening Confederation, leading with a demand for establishment of a federal ministry of provincial affairs.

The outline came in a carefully-prepared statement to the legislature by Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan who stirred up a controversy a week ago by contending B.C. would be better off financially separated from Canada.

Outside the legislature, he said he was speaking on behalf of the cabinet and Premier Bennett confirmed it.

In his speech, he accused Ottawa of a "pork-barrel approach" to national politics, favoring such provinces as Quebec and ignoring B.C.

He also made it clear he doesn't think British Columbians need to learn to speak French in order to be good Canadians.

Mr. Kiernan indicated his earlier comments were intended to spark a debate on Confederation but he was "disappointed in the resulting debate in this house."

Resuming his economic theme, he said B.C. pays

handsomely for its membership in the Canadian nation "in three distinct fields of federal-provincial relations... trade, tariffs and taxation."

"We don't begrudge that but it is a fact of life. We know we need to assist less fortunate or less advanced areas (of Canada)."

Mr. Kiernan argues that in 1961-62 the mark-up represented by tariff protection on B.C. goods sold in other parts of Canada totalled $100 million yet the reverse internal trade had added only $10 million in tariff mark-ups on items B.C. bought from the rest of Canada.

Further, total B.C. sales to other provinces run only about $200 million a year while purchases from the rest of Canada run between $750 and $900 million.

But foreign markets buy almost six times as much B.C. products as does the rest of Canada, he said, pointing out provincial exports run about $1.2 billion annually.

Regarding taxation policies, he said B.C. is one of three provinces that does not receive equalization payments which in the coming year will total about $300 million to Quebec alone.

"It is time all the cards were put on the table because this goes beyond equalization payments. There are project payments too — such as the South Saskatchewan Dam, the Marietta hydro-electric program and others — which are not calculated in the equalization formula yet come from general funds."

"But we are left holding the Alberta stayed close with veteran Paul Enoch turning in a triple gold medal performance, missing a medal in only one of the four events he tried.

Based on three points for a first-place gold, two for a second-place silver and one for a bronze, the provinces lined up this way:

NARROW MARGIN
Alberta 24 points; Manitoba 23; Ontario and Quebec 18; Saskatchewan 4; and British Columbia 3.

Curling: B.C.'s record is 0-2. The west coast team lost its third-round match 8-7 to Saskatchewan.

Turcotte Set Down After Hialeah Spill
MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Canadian jockey Ron Turcotte was suspended for 10 days by Hialeah officials Monday in the wake of a three-horse spill in Saturday's Bougainvillea Handicap.

Turcotte, from Grand Falls, N.B., was judged guilty of permitting Point du Jour to drift out at the eighth pole "causing serious interference."

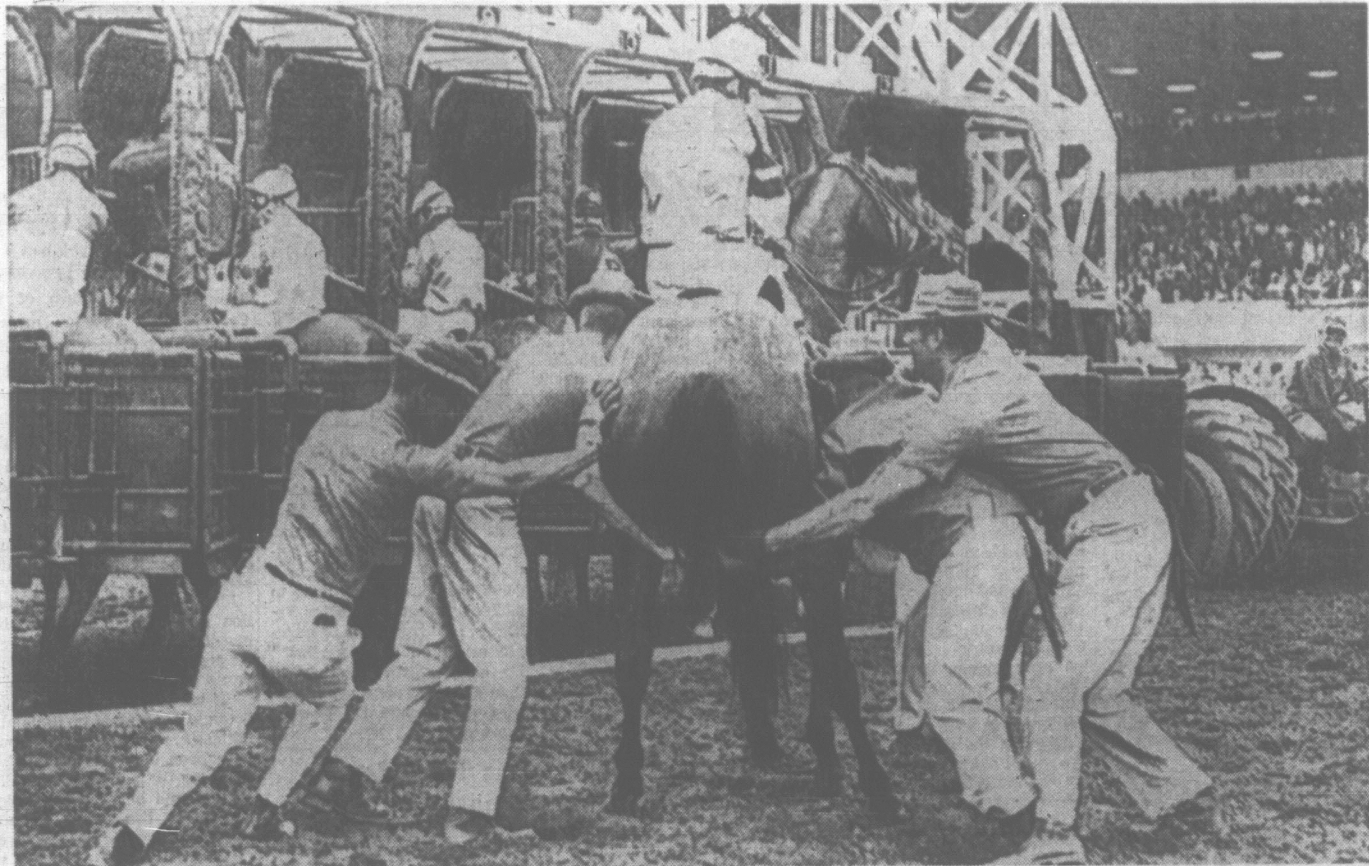

When Point du Jour came out, Exhibitionist clipped his heels and went down, spilling Braulio Baeza. A second later, Big Red Rocket fell over Exhibitionist, dropping Larry Adams.

. . . SAYS EDUCATION COMES FIRST

Trotters Offer Lou Cool Million

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Harlem Globe Trotters, who once lured Wilt Chamberlain away from Kansas University after his junior year, are hot on the trail today of UCLA's fabulous sophomore giant Lew Alcindor.

Alcindor hinted Sunday that the touring Globe Trotters had offered him a contract if he would drop out of school and join them.

But the 7-foot-1½" lad from New York appeared cool to the wealthy offer, reportedly for $1,000,000.

"Right now I'm interested in my education," the centre of the No. 1 ranked Bruins said. "But it's possible something could come up in the future."

Owner Jerry Saperstein of the Globe Trotters was reported to have said in Wichita, that he was willing to make such a rich offer to Alcindor in a $1,000,000 contract basis which would be renewable every five years.

Big Lew said he had been approached several times in the past by the famous basketball clowns, but added, "nothing came of it."

Coach John Wooden of UCLA, when queried on the possibility of losing his high-scoring superstar, stressed he would not try to influence Alcindor in any decision.

"If the Globe Trotters were to offer him a legitimate million dollars, with no loopholes, who's to say he might not take it?" Wooden commented.

"I could not in good faith and conscience influence any boy either way in something like that. Suppose I advised him the wrong way. Then I'd feel badly. It's a decision that is up to the boy."

Alcindor's rumored offer is a parallel to the case of Chamberlain, who left Kansas with a year of eligibility remaining to join the Globe Trotters. He later switched to the National Basketball Association.

The NBA has made it a policy not to sign a college player until his original class has graduated. The new American Basketball Association apparently is following the same ground rules.

Wooden indicated also he scented the possibilities of a publicity stunt in Saperstein's rumored offer which the coach said as far as he knows had not yet been made.

"You'd think they would go to the boy first and make the offer before saying they were going to do it," Wooden added.

Mary Convinces Goalie He IS England's Worst

"Am I the worst soccer goalie in England?" mused Ted Bishop at Slough, England, after he had allowed 73 goals in his team's first eight games this season.

After Sunday's match he had his answer.

"There has never been a more hopeless goalie than me," he muttered.

Bishop gave up seven goals and his team again took it on the chin.

"He's a nice chap, but he's not a soccer player," that came from an opposing player who booted four shots past Bishop Sunday.

The player's name is Mary Westcott. She is 16 and the star of her all-girls team.

Canada has eliminated Mexico from Thomas Cup badminton competition and will meet the winner of the United States-Jamaica match — expected to be the U.S. — in a second-round clash that may be held in Calgary.

Canada finished a two-day contest with Mexico Sunday at Mexico City by taking five matches and sweeping the series 9-0.

Wayne Macdonnell, the Canadian champion from Vancouver, picked up the fifth point required for a Canadian triumph by winning Sunday's first match, defeating Antonio Rangel 12-15, 15-6, 15-8.

Completing the team, which got Canada past the first round for the second time in 19 years, were Bruce Hollick, Ed Patterson and Bob Patterson of Vancouver; Jim Carrawath, Woodstock, Ont., and Jamie Paulson, Calgary.

Elsewhere in the wonderful world of sports:

Fred Glover, 39, has become the third player to score more than 500 goals in professional hockey. Glover, who scored four times in 31 games with Chicago in 1952 in his only National League trial, scored twice for Cleveland Barons in weekend American League games to run his career total to 501. . . . Only Maurice "Rocket" Richard, the retired Montreal ace, and Detroit's Gordie Howe have scored more. . . . Vancouver swimmer Elaine Tanner bettered the women's world 400-yard freestyle record at Durban, South Africa, but the mark may not be recognized. Elaine, 15, swam the distance in four minutes, 43.8 seconds, half a second better than the current record. However, a time of 4:38.3, posted by Cathy Wainwright of Australia, is awaiting recognition. . . . Miss Tanner also won a butterfly race but was beaten in backstroke by world record holder Karen Muir.

In boxing: British heavy-weight Billy Walker Monday night won on a first-round disqualification over Italy's Giulio Rinaldi at Manchester to earn a bout against Karl Mildenberger for the West German European title. . . . Paul Takashi Fujii, former U.S. marine from Hawaii, knocked out Carl Penaloze of the Philippines at Tokyo and earned a title shot against Italy's Sandro Lopopolo, the world junior welterweight king. . . . In another bout at Manchester, Johnny Cooke used a stiff left jab to outpoint Brian McCaffrey and win the vacant British welterweight crown.

The Dodgers depart for their Vero Beach, Fla., spring training ground Feb. 25. The group will look different from last year's. The faded Koufax is gone. Maury Wills has been traded and the new faces include Bob Bailey, Jim Hickman, Ron Hunt, Bob Lee and Gene Michael.

With 21 games remaining in the regular schedule for Chicago, it appears he will erase his own record of 59 assists for one season. He also has a good chance to top the 100-point mark.

Meanwhile, Stan Mikita, the spearhead of the Hawks' offence, has built his lead atop the individual scoring parade to 20 points. Mikita, two-time scoring champ, has 27 goals and a league - leading 47 assists.

DeJordy Backs Up Black Hawk Guns In Record Streak

MONTREAL (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks are riding the longest undefeated streak in their history as they continue to pull away from the five other National Hockey League clubs and move toward their first league title.

But while the Hawks hold a commanding lead in the standings, there are only nine points separating the second - and fourth-place clubs.

While Chicago's scoring guns continue to explode against all opposition, the club's defensive effort, led by goalie Denis DeJordy, cannot be overlooked.

DeJordy, 28-year-old native of St. Hyacinthe, Que., has appeared in 12 of Chicago's last 14 games, in which the Hawks have won 11 and tied three.

DeJordy's goals-against-average over that streak is a brilliant 1.75, more than a goal a game lower than his average for the 17 games he appeared in during the first half of the season. He also has three shutouts in the second half of the schedule.

Last season, DeJordy was with St. Louis of the Central Professional Hockey League at his own request. He felt he could benefit more by playing full time in the minors rather than appearing in only a few games in the NHL as he did in 1964-65.

DeJordy's play, combined with the injured Glenn Hall's average of 2.33, the lowest individual figure in the league, gives Chicago a combined average of 2.37, best in the league.

NEARLY OWN RECORD

Meanwhile, Stan Mikita, the spearhead of the Hawks' offence, has built his lead atop the individual scoring parade to 20 points. Mikita, two-time scoring champ, has 27 goals and a league - leading 47 assists.

Cincy Rated Choice For 10th Franchise

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The American Football League will expand to 10 teams by June, and Cincinnati is reported to have the inside track for the next franchise.

League owners meeting here Monday also have discussed moving the annual Super Bowl game to Miami.

Cincinnati, Birmingham, Ala.; Seattle, Wash., and Phoenix, Ariz., were cities mentioned most prominently to become the league's 10th team. The owners also gave president Milt Woodard a three-year contract.

Woodard's salary was not disclosed, but the contract would keep him in office until the merger of the AFL with the National Football League is completed in 1970.

In other business, the owners voted to open the upcoming season a week later than usual.

to avoid baseball scheduling conflicts at parks where the games will be played. The season will end Dec. 24.

Many owners were concerned about the relatively poor turnout at the initial Super Bowl game at Los Angeles. Only 63,000 fans turned out for the game in the 100,000-seat Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

Commissioner Peter Rozelle was present as the owners discussed the possibility of moving the Super Bowl game to Miami where the Orange Bowl is being expanded to seat 75,000.

Burrard Drydock of Vancouver was low bidder today in tenders for construction of mezzanine platforms in the Queen of Esquimalt and Queen of Vancouver ferries in order to boost carrying capacity of each from 116 to 148.

It bid a combination of $295,502 for both contracts or $145,895 for the Queen of Vancouver and $150,993 for the Queen of Esquimalt, depending on time sequences required by the British Columbia Ferry Authority.

The only other bidder was Yarrow of Victoria, which tendered $177,061 or $169,520, depending on time, for the Queen of Vancouver, and $175,036 for the Queen of Esquimalt.

Green Lost to Bruins for Season

BOSTON (AP)—Defenceman Ted Green, of the Boston Bruins, underwent surgery today and will be lost to the National League club for the season.

Doctors removed loose cartilage from Green's left knee. His right knee bothered him much of the 1965-66 season and he was operated on during the off-season for that ailment.

Pope Disappointed
By Ho's Message

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Vatican expressed sadness today over the message President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam sent to Pope Paul.

A comment in the Vatican daily L'Osservatore Romano said that the reply of U.S. President Johnson and Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam to the Pope's latest peace appeals "do not seem to reject the exhortation from the visible head of the church."

It said Ho's reply, however, "does not unfortunately, contain any new elements to furnish hopes for the start, at least now, of negotiations for an honorable end to the sad conflict."

"The latest developments concerning Vietnam are causes of grave and profound sadness," the paper said.

This was the first formal comment from the Vatican on the answers to Johnson, Thieu and Ho to the Pope's pleas last Wednesday that the Lunar New Year truce be prolonged into negotiations.

The paper said that despite setbacks to the Pope's peace efforts he would not give up trying and that no matter how hard and difficult the way might be to peace the church would not be discouraged.

'DEEPER IN QUAGMIRE'
SAY 3 U.S. SENATORS

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Three United States senators Monday criticized resumption of American bombing attacks against North Vietnam.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D-Ark.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said:

"I regret this very much. I'm sorry to hear it. I regret that Americans have not been able to take this matter to the peace table."

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), said:

"We should not have started the bombing in the first place and therefore we shouldn't continue it."

Sen. Ernest Gruening (D-Alaska), said:

"Our military commitment in Southeast Asia is an incredible piece of folly. I think the resumption of bombing is bad. We haven't accomplished anything in the two years of bombing except to stiffen resistance, prolong the war and get us deeper and deeper into the quagmire."

WAR RAGES AT FULL TILT
ON BOTH SIDES OF BORDER

SAIGON (AP)—The air war returned to full swing today on both sides of the border as U.S. fighter-bombers pounded railroads and other supply routes in North Vietnam. Radio Hanoi said two were shot down. U.S. Navy vessels attacked North Vietnamese shipping.

Peking and Pyongyang broadcast pledges of continued support for the Viet Cong from China and North Korea. The messages to the guerrillas were signed by Defence Minister Lin Biao of China and Kim Chang Pong of North Korea.

There was no immediate comment here on Hanoi's report of the downing of two planes. If confirmed, the official list of American losses north of the border would rise to 475.

In South Vietnam, U.S. and South Vietnamese ground forces reported only light contact with the enemy, but U.S. pilots flew a near record 535 sorties in support of infantry Monday. The American record for one day of such single combat flights in the South is 549, set last Jan. 13.

U.S. spokesmen also announced that seven men of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division were killed and four were wounded Monday night when five rounds of their own artillery landed among them.

The spokesmen also announced that one U.S. soldier was killed Sunday and 14 were wounded when a U.S. plane's bomb went astray during an operation. However, a Claymore mine went off in the same area just before the bomb explosion, and the spokesmen said it might have caused some of the casualties.

WILSON

Secret Plan Available
For Viet Peace

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Wilson said today there is in existence a secret plan which could bring peace to Vietnam, but he did not identify the participants in such a plan or give any further details.

Speaking in the House of Commons, Wilson said: "There is an initiative—a plan—which could bring peace tomorrow, which requires a very small move to activate all the complicated machinery that would bring us peace."

He said efforts to get Vietnam peace talks started came close to success during the Vietnamese Lunar New Year truce.

But the conditions needed to bring both sides to the conference table were not created during the truce, he said. He listed particularly a North Vietnamese buildup during the ceasefire, which "threatened to create a severe military imbalance."

Wilson said it also made it harder for the Americans to believe that the North Vietnamese leaders wanted to use the truce for a peace effort "rather than for a further effort in war."

Must Keep Pressing for Solution

"The tragic disappointment of these hopes... must not and will not deter us from pressing for a solution," Wilson said.

The British leader was replying to questions on his week-long talks with Soviet Premier Kosygin, which mainly concerned Vietnam.

He said he thought both the Americans and the North Vietnamese genuinely wanted peace, but trust had to be built up.

In their talks with Kosygin, who left for home Monday, Wilson and Foreign Secretary George Brown "made a sustained effort to try to secure conditions during the Vietnamese Lunar New Year truce period which would make possible negotiations for a settlement."

Wilson added: "I believe there were moments when this could have been very near."

Wilson went on:

"I do not underestimate the renewed dangers that accompany the resumption of fighting; and we must all deeply regret that the Tet period, the period of the Vietnamese New Year, was not utilized to create the conditions that were needed for a move to the conference table."

"In particular, the massive southward movements of troops and supplies in the North, on a scale far greater than in the Christmas, or indeed in many ceasefires, threatened to create a severe military imbalance."

Wilson made his second parliamentary statement on Vietnam in two days. And again he declared: "The road to a solution remains open."

An authoritative British official said today that Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin sincerely tried to stop the war in Vietnam but failed because of a lack of consensus among Hanoi factions.

"The opportunity is gone and we have to look for another," the official said in disclosing some of the secret manoeuvring in the final hours of Kosygin's eight-day visit and talks with Prime Minister Wilson.

Publicly, Kosygin sided with the North Vietnam position that the truce was a tactical move.

Weeks of Hope Ended, Says U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vietnam peace prospects appear at their lowest point in two months today as U.S. bombing of North Vietnam resumed and weeks of optimistic speculation ended.

U.S. officials said peace efforts had receded to their pre-Christmas position.

President Johnson, in announcing the resumption of bombing late Monday, said he had hoped the ceasefire during the Lunar New Year "might lead to some abatement of hostilities and to moves toward peace."

But he said the North Vietnamese has used the pause "for major re-supply efforts of their troops in South Vietnam."

Johnson apparently referred to Sunday night's meeting in London between Soviet Premier Kosygin and British Prime Minister Wilson when he said: "Despite our efforts and those of third parties, no other response has yet come from Hanoi."

Johnson earlier had indicated determination to resume the air war in the absence of any North Vietnamese easing of military activity.

But the North Vietnamese insisted on a halt in U.S. bombing and withdrawal of troops before peace talks could get started.

Peace hopes began building up about two months ago when North Vietnamese officials dropped hints negotiations could start if the U.S. bombing was permanently halted.

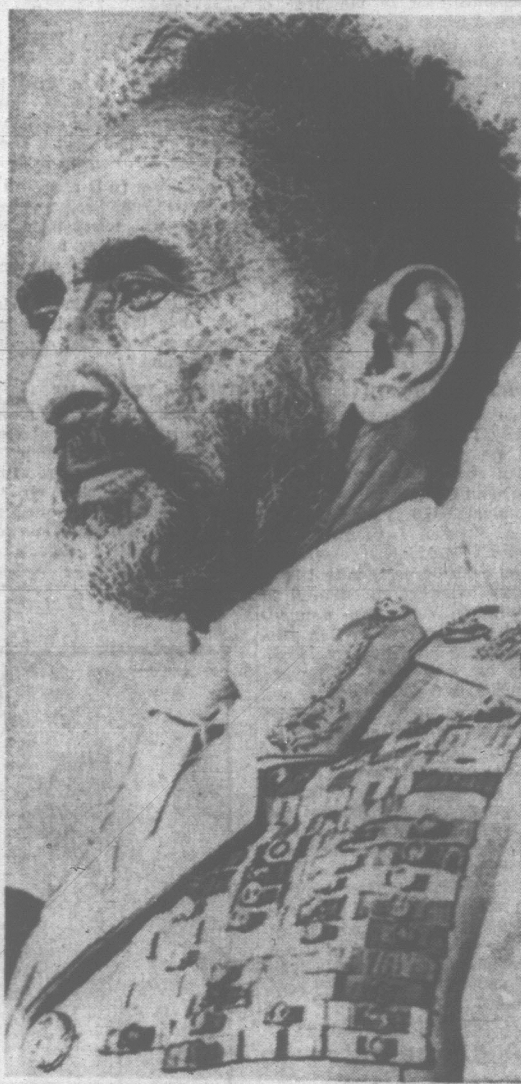

There have been three truce intervals since December and diplomats had been particularly hopeful that the latest might bring a breakthrough in the quest for a peace formula.

In his White House statement, Johnson said: "The door to peace is and will remain open and we are prepared at any time to go more than halfway to meet any equitable overture from the other side."

Officials reiterated this meant North Vietnam must scale down its military operations if U.S. bombing of the north is to be halted.

Washington "has shut the door with a bang" on the possibility of talks held out by North Vietnam and United Nations Secretary-General U Thant, the agency's commentator, Leonid Velichansky, said. The talks were resumed "despite the demands of millions of people in the United States and all over the world to stop the criminal aggression," he said.

"They were resumed despite the fact that the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam, through its foreign minister, announced the possibility of negotiations if the U.S. were to stop unconditionally its air raids and other military actions" against North Vietnam.

World Press
Critical of U.S.

By REUTERS

World press reaction today generally criticized the United States for its resumption of bombing raids over North Vietnam.

British newspapers described the renewed bombing as a disappointing letdown after the week-long talks in London between the Soviet and British prime ministers.

The mass-circulation Labor Daily Mirror says last-minute Vietnam talks between Harold Wilson and Alexei Kosygin had come within a hair's breadth of success.

But a hoped-for message from Hanoi that North Vietnam would co-operate with peace moves never arrived on the Soviet leader's final day in London, the newspaper says.

The London Times comments: "... Mr. Edward Heath (Opposition leader) got the impression on Sunday that Mr. Kosygin would make sure that the Russian voice counted in Hanoi if the Americans kept off the bombing."

"Now that prospect is shattered again. The setback is severe and at the moment there can only be a faint hope that Mr. Kosygin and Mr. Wilson, understanding each other more fully, will be better able to seize on another opening when it comes."

The Italian Communist party organ, L'Unita, says the end of the pause demonstrated the U.S. fear of peace.

$150-a-Day Fee
Brings Action

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The British Columbia Jockey Club has cancelled its 18-day horse racing meet at Sandown Park scheduled for the fall.

Jack Diamond, co-owner of the club, informed North Saanich council Monday there will be no racing in 1967 because of council's decision last year to charge a fee of $150 per day for services.

Describing the fee as "exorbitant," he said in a letter the club regretted making the decision.

But he added, the racing organization had no other alternative due to council's decision to charge a daily fee of $150, over and above the annual property tax of $2,800 and other demanded expenses.

He did not list the demanded expenditures.

The club did not pay a licence fee when North Saanich was an unorganized district.

$27,000 DEFICIT

"Last year our operation deficit was $27,000," he said. "This did not include your fee of $150 per day."

The fee, still unpaid by the club, was imposed by council last year before a fire destroyed two barns and 15 horses.

Reeve J. B. Cumming took issue with Mr. Diamond.

"We made no exorbitant demand," he said. "I informed Mr. Diamond that he would have to conform to our local bylaws as the rest of us have to."

ALLOWED BY ACT

He noted that the $150 licence fee is the permissible amount as set out in the Municipal Act by the provincial government.

"Since we have to provide traffic control, extra policing, general legal expenses on some of the race track followers, fire fighting, ambulance service, and to contend with difficulties by a concentration of over 1,000 cars in a small area in a short time, I feel that $150 is quite reasonable," he stated.

The reeve pointed out North Saanich has few restaurants, hotels or service stations to make secondary gains on the large concentration of people at the race track.

The race track, he said, contained about 100 acres of land assessed at $400 per acre.

The reeve said the other "demanded expenditures" referred to by Mr. Diamond were not too clear.

PERMIT NEEDED

"We told him the owner had to take out a building permit before doing any construction work," he said. "The Metropolitan Health Board has advised us that sanitary facilities should be provided, as well as cooking facilities for men who sleep and live in the horse barns."

He said the fire marshal, through the attorney-general's office, recommended the installation of a sprinkler system in the present barns and in new barns.

"The department also drew to our attention there were no sprinklers in the barns which burned last fall with the loss of valuable horses," the reeve said.

WATER AVAILABLE

"We were able to assure the attorney-general that water supply was available at the race track," he said.

Protest
Pause
UrgedDouglas Scores
U.S. Over Viet

OTTAWA (CP)—Vietnam dominated debate in the Commons Monday with External Affairs Minister Martin urging restraint of Canadian criticism against the United States bombing of North Vietnam.

NDP Leader Douglas countered with an emotional appeal for a strong Canadian protest and demanded a halt in Canadian arms sales to the U.S. unless there is a guarantee they will not be sent to Vietnam.

Bryce Mackasey (L—Montreal Verdun) followed with an even more emotional denunciation of Mr. Douglas, accusing him of anti-Americanism and "nothing more than plain demagoguery."

The exchanges came as the House completed its six-day debate on Finance Minister Sharp's supplementary budget introduced in December. Budget debates are traditionally the vehicle for a wide range of topics.

Today the MPs resume study of a government bill to set up a deposit insurance corporation designed to insure individual deposits of up to $20,000 in banks and trust companies.

HAS NO EFFECT

Mr. Martin said the government has taken no public position on bombing of North Vietnam because there is not much chance it could be stopped as the result of an appeal from Canada.

He saw the bombing as the key to resolving the Vietnam conflict "but there are other actions and responsibilities which must also be fitted into the total pattern of steps towards a peaceful settlement."

"I suggest it would be self-destructive, self-defeating, if our public statements... were to have the effect of slamming doors instead of opening them, of closing off potentially useful dialogues instead of stimulating and nurturing the confidential exchange of viewpoints," Mr. Martin said.

The minister said the time is ripe for the International Code of Conduct comprising Poland, India and Canada to help in bringing the Vietnam war to an end.

Mr. Martin said Canada was

A happy St. Valentine's Day to all true lovers; and for those who flap solitary along life's flyway, a word of cheer. Cupid has been computerized. If you haven't been able to find the right partner, a mechanical brain waits to give you an assist.

The Toronto-based outfit that offers this service describes itself as "The only computer dater coast-to-coast across Canada."

Then, after citing the odds against stumbling on the perfect date as 679,857 to one, it describes how by sophisticated mathematics it plucks the names and telephone numbers of three ideal consorts from its memory bank.

This for $10 — half that if you're a student — with the further assurance that your name will be "kept in constant scan to check you with new compatibles."

If, like me, you managed against those daunting odds to find your ideal girl or guy, you may be tempted to scoff at IBM-directed romance. But for the unblest, this earth can be a devilish lonely place. If a business machine can help these to companionship, who except maybe a suspicious-minded missing persons bureau sergeant would deny them their chance?

Our copy of the Operation Checkmate prospectus tumbled out from between pages of Uvic's bright-eyed "Martlet," a circumstance which seems to indicate that loneliness can exist even on a campus where young of both sexes swarm.

My Valentine and I promptly settled down to answer the questions asked of each would-be subscriber to the service. These are varied, detailed, and searching enough to justify the sponsor's emphasis upon honest replies.

Here, for instance, is question 9 (I) with its demand that the applicant rate himself or herself on a seven-point scale that begins one point below "unattractive." That's even more agonizing than the next query, which requires a self-rating that descends from extremely intelligent to "much below average."

Sexual activity, from a virtuous "never" to a wolfish "very often," is also ferreted out. So is degree of alcohol and tobacco consumption, if any. The computer, nosey to the last degree, also wants to know whether a lasting relationship is aimed at, or merely an opening of "new social horizons."

I'm not sure what that last euphemism means, and won't even hazard a guess. In any case, long before my dear mouse and I had finished setting down our answers, we were convinced that the computer, though perhaps a trifle doubtfully, would have permitted us to meet.

For this first step in a relationship which has not only opened new horizons but proved lasting, we had to depend upon the only agency operating in the years before the mechanized brain invaded the hearts-and-flowers field.

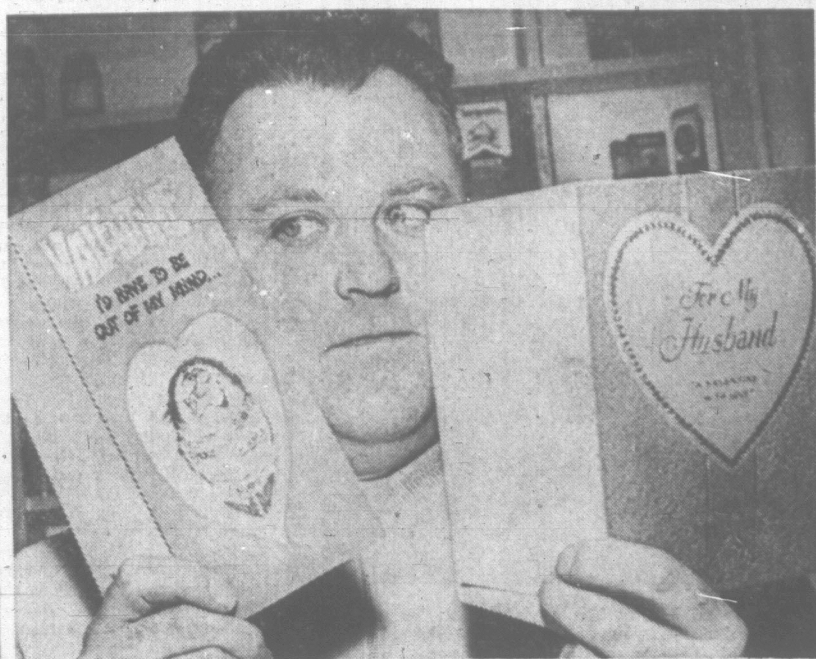

This was the luck, or perhaps fate, that brought us to a meeting, then pitched us into a "boy finds girl, loses girl" sequence that would baffle a whole battery of computers.

Those, which are guided by logic, would never have permitted us a second meeting after we had flubbed the first. But luck permitted us to beat odds that would blanch a horseplayer, not once but twice. We did meet again, and ultimately found ourselves, in a mutual state of amazement, being joined by a one-eyed parson in a church outside which a dogwood tree stood in second bloom.

Eventually, if the species lasts that long, computerization may be the rule in all matters, including those of the heart.

But even when that day dawns, certain indefinables that go to the making of a union will persist in messing up the statistics.

You can give love its chance through a computer, but that mercurial emotion can't be machine-punched on a card. There at least, the human spirit insists upon remaining free to withhold or bestow.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN is all part of the day's work when you sell Valentines, says pharmacist Mel Sutherland of 1725 Garnett. The person with large sense of humor gets comic card, and the romantic gets the syrupy model at right—if you guess right.

Safest move is to attach card to a large gift, or tuck a fiver inside. Some of best-loved cards of course will be home made and marked "Dere Mom." Main thing, remember this is Valentine's Day. You'll be on time up until midnight. (Times photo.)

Inside Story Told About Metro Area By 'Working Tool'

A 58-page statistical report on social characteristics of the Metropolitan Victoria region was made public today.

The report was prepared by the Capital Region Planning Board of British Columbia for the Community Welfare Council of Greater Victoria.

"The basic intent of the report is to give a working tool to the many social agencies within the Victoria census metropolitan area," said planning board chairman Allan Cox, the Oak Bay resident.

"It is hoped that the report will also provide an over-all statistical guide for the community and a common area for data collecting by the agencies and municipalities concerned."

The report, which is available to the public, contains information previously available "but not really accessible," said Tony Roberts, the board's planning director.

Although figures from the 1961 census are used (the next census is not until 1971) he said the value of the report is "not depreciated that much. Very often it is the relative position that is important."

GREATEST GROWTH
Some of the facts from the report:

- The highest population growth from 1956 to 1961 was in the unorganized area west of Victoria and those parts of Saanich near and including Gordon Head.
- The lowest population growth was in a belt south of Harriet and Tolmie and west of Douglas south to James Bay, and from the Inner Harbor to Oak Bay, between Queens-Bay and Fort streets.
- The age group under 14 in 1961 was highest in parts of the unorganized area and in Saanich municipality north of Admirals, Whiteside, Lodge, Cedar Hill Cross Road and Oak Bay municipality.
- The age group 65 and over was highest in the city downtown, James Bay and Beacon Hill areas, and lowest in most parts of Saanich and the unorganized areas.
- By education, those with only elementary school completion were highest in the poorer parts of Victoria stretching from the Inner Harbor to Oak Bay between Queens-Bay and Fort; the Gorge area south of Harriet and west of Douglas; between Cook, Tolmie, Richmond and Bay; and near Glen Lake.
- By contrast, the lowest places with only elementary school completion were in a belt from south Oak Bay north to Mount Douglas Park and between Cordova Park and Elk-Beaver Lake.
- Households with one person were highest in central and southern parts of the city, lowest in a broad east-west belt of Saanich.
- Households with six and more persons were lowest in southern parts of the city and all of Oak Bay, highest in parts of Saanich and the unorganized areas.
- Tenant-occupied dwellings were lowest in most parts of Saanich, highest in the central section of the city, James Bay and Beacon Hill Park areas.
- Households with an occupancy of less than one year were highest in some parts of the city and Esquimalt, lowest in most of Saanich and all of Oak Bay.
- The highest percentage of the labor force employed as craftsmen, production workers and laborers lived in Saanich and Central Saanich, the lowest in Oak Bay, the Beacon Hill Park area and south Esquimalt.
- The average family wage and salary income level showed the general area from south Oak Bay to Mount Douglas Park as the highest, the lowest being the poorer central and northwest parts of the city and Sidney.

Improper Words Used in Job Ads Draw Labor Department Warning

The B.C. labor department said today "numerous advertisements in the daily newspapers seeking applicants for employment" contravene the Fair Employment Practices Act.

The warning was contained in the department's weekly summary activities circulated to newspapers and other groups.

"Under this legislation words which are clearly improper for use in advertisements are 'boy,' 'girl' or 'young' and phrases designating an exclusive age group, for example 'ages 20 to 30 years' or a preference for any age under 45 years."

AVOID COMPLAINTS
"The foregoing is published to seek the co-operation of everyone in the matter of complying with the provisions of the statute with respect to advertisements for employment, and to avoid potential complaints which may be made because of."

"The principle of the provision of the act regarding age discrimination is that every individual who have equal opportunity to compete for or to hold any job for which he may be qualified, without regard to his age, with special emphasis on that age group ranging from 45 to 65 years."

Saanich To Meet On Sewerage Plan

Saanich council will hold a special meeting Friday at 4:30 p.m. to consider the proposed sewerage utility.

The issue was tabled at a recent council meeting and referred to a special council meeting which was to have been held last Friday. It was cancelled so more information could be obtained.

The proposal involves wrapping up the individually financed sewer areas into one common utility, averaging out the varying costs.

ALL READY TO DELIVER UNKIND CUTS?

Political opponents beware — Premier Bennett will be presented with a hand-forged silver sword.

The presentation will be made next Tuesday by Grand Knight Brian B. Lawless on behalf of the Knights of Columbus. The ceremony will be held at Red Lion Inn.

Mr. Lawless said the presentation is in recognition of outstanding service in public life. Former Victoria mayor Richard B. Wilson was similarly honored in 1965.

Malahat Crash Claims Fourth; One Survives

Inquest Scheduled Tonight at Colwood

A spectacular car crash on the Malahat Saturday which shuffled out the lives of three teenagers claimed a fourth victim early today.

David York, 18, of 786 Goldstream, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd York, died in St. Joseph's Hospital. He suffered multiple injuries and had been listed in critical condition from the time he was rushed to hospital by ambulance.

ONE SURVIVOR

David's brother Fred, 15, is now the lone survivor of the single-car crash at about 7:30 a.m., two miles north of Hall's Boathouse. He is in good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Three of the five young people were found dead when the southbound car smashed through a guard rail and hurtled 150 feet down a rocky bluff.

The other victims were Shawn Eric Adams, 19, of 3114 Mars; Sandra Laws, 17, of 184 Joseph; and Janet Chissano, also 17, of 1225 Rudlin.

An inquest into all four deaths will start tonight at Sands Funeral Chapel in Colwood.

SCHOOL SEWER HOOK-UP APPROVED

Esquimalt Backs Down

Esquimalt council did an about-face in a pre-council meeting Monday night by permitting a proposed school for Christie Point to hook up to the municipal sewer lines.

The $1 million, 750-student school has been stalled in the planning stages for months because of Esquimalt's refusal to allow tapping of the Christie Point apartments' private sewer line with an eventual hook-up to the Esquimalt main. The outfall is at Lang Cove.

As recently as last Friday Reeve Ray Bryant said his council made the original decision on the advice of engineers who stated that a hook-up with the main line would create troubles for the municipality.

Monday night, in the face of pressure from a hard core of councillors who wished to see the school project go ahead, council reversed its decision.

The disposal of sewage in Lang Cove already has the blessings of the Greater Victoria health authorities and the pollution control board.

ALREADY POLLUTED
Both bodies admit that Lang Cove waters are already polluted but they say the injection of the school sewage will make little difference to the existing problem.

In a formal statement this morning Reeve Bryant said the change of heart came after listening to "new alternative proposals" presented by engineers.

Following the discussions Reeve Bryant said council "has decided to allow the discharge of primary treated effluent into the municipal system from Christie Point School."

"This will mean that the effluent will be treated at the site prior to being discharged into the municipal system and will therefore solve the problem of the council's concern for further significant pollution of Lang Cove."

The statement added that times of discharge from a holding tank at the school will be strictly controlled.

School Board chairman Peter Bunn said he is delighted with the Esquimalt decision.

CARETAKER DIES AT 70

Louis the Parrot Loses Old Friend

One of Victoria's best-known Chinese residents, Wa Wong, caretaker of the famous parrot Louis, died Saturday.

Mr. Wong, 70, of 1706 Denman, gained international attention in the 52 years he lived here.

He will be buried at Royal Oak next Saturday following a funeral service at Sands Mortuary Ltd. at 1 p.m.

Little has been made public about Mr. Wong's life although his illustrious charge has been well publicized because of the bird's involvement in a famous will.

Mr. Wong came here from Canton and went into service for a wealthy spinster, Miss Victoria Wilson, caring for her extensive aviary. Among her many birds was the parrot, or macaw as it is often called, Louis.

When Miss Wilson died 17 years ago, she left Mr. Wong in charge of the birds with a provision in her will for their care during their lifetime. Louis was the sole survivor of recent years. He was maintained in the former Wilson home at 737 Courtney.

Executors of the Wilson estate said at the time of Louis' death the residue of the estate was to be shared by the Red Cross and Royal Jubilee Hospital here. But Louis, now more than 100 years old, lives on.

LOYALTY PRAISED
Recently the executors moved the bird to an unnamed location and announced an allowance had been made for its care and the two other beneficiaries would now receive their due.

Whether Louis was left in Mr. Wong's care was never made public. The executors did add to the announcement, however, by praising Mr. Wong's loyalty and devotion over the years.

Known also as Wong Wah Yue, Mr. Wong is survived by the widow Muriel and daughters Shirley and Beverly.

B.C. Stand Spelled Out

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

The provincial government Monday gave a rough outline of its formula for strengthening Confederation, leading with a demand for establishment of a federal ministry of provincial affairs.

The outline came in a carefully-prepared statement to the legislature by Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan who stirred up a controversy a week ago by contending B.C. would be better off financially separated from Canada.

Outside the legislature, he said he was speaking on behalf of the cabinet and Premier Bennett confirmed it.

In his speech, he accused Ottawa of a "pork-barrel approach" to national politics, favoring such provinces as Quebec and ignoring B.C.

He also made it clear he doesn't think British Columbians need to learn to speak French in order to be good Canadians. Mr. Kiernan indicated his earlier comments were intended to spark a debate on Confederation but he was "disappointed in the resulting debate in this house."

Resuming his economic theme, he said B.C. pays handsomely for its membership in the Canadian nation "in three distinct fields of federal-provincial relations... trade, tariffs and taxation."

"We don't begrudge that but it is a fact of life. We know we need to assist less fortunate or less advanced areas (of Canada)."

Mr. Kiernan argues that in 1961-62 the mark-up represented by tariff protection on B.C. goods sold in other parts of Canada totalled $100 million yet the reverse internal trade had added only $10 million in tariff mark-ups on items B.C. bought from the rest of Canada.

Further, total B.C. sales to other provinces run only about $200 million a year while purchases from the rest of Canada run between $750 and $900 million.

But foreign markets buy almost six times as much B.C. products as does the rest of Canada, he said, pointing out provincial exports run about $1.2 billion annually.

Regarding taxation policies, he said B.C. is one of three provinces that does not receive equalization payments which in the coming year will total about $300 million to Quebec alone.

"It is time all the cards were put on the table because this goes beyond equalization payments. There are project payments too — such as the South Saskatchewan Dam, the Manitoba hydro-electric program and others — which are not calculated in the equalization formula yet come from general funds."

"But we are left holding the bag" when seeking aid for the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, the hydro-electric program and the proposed new crossing of Burrard Inlet, he said.

"We say this is a pork-barrel approach to politics and this is the sort of thing that is weakening Confederation. Let's face up to it and correct the situation."

"This isn't beating Ottawa over the head. If we're to feel that we are equal partners we must be treated equally and we should not have to go down to Ottawa on bended knee to plead for fair consideration."

Then, to stress the importance, he read the following statement to the legislature to summarize the government's position:

"Perhaps it is time for the federal government to appoint a Continued on Page 23"

Keep Golf Shots On Beam

Snowmobiles and golf carts can't be operated at night any longer unless equipped with motorcycle-type headlights and tail lights, brakes and a muffler for internal combustion engines, the provincial cabinet has decided.

The controls were extended through amendments to the Motor Vehicles Act regulations.

In addition, snowmobiles (over 40 inches in width) and snow vehicles (under 40 inches) can't be operated on roads at all unless they have a special permit from the local police.

The regulations require the snowmobile owner to obtain a permit from the nearest RCMP officer for highway driving and the officer can include various limitations in the permit including such things as whether the vehicle can be operated at night.

In cases where the snowmobiles are to be operated on municipal roads, a similar permit must be obtained from the chief of police.

In other amendments, the order-in-council requires safety glass installations in "camper" units built onto vehicles, permits trailers under one-ton to be connected to a vehicle by bumper hitches and rules out the high flaring "butterfly" handlebars for motorcycles, requiring handlebars to be less than 15 inches above the seat.

Central Bargaining Good Idea But Far Away, Says IWA Man

Centralized labor-management bargaining in Canada is a good idea.

But a Victoria union leader said "a lot of work must be put into it" before this day arrives.

Murray Drew, president of the International Woodworkers of America here, was commenting on weekend statements in Vancouver by Dr. H. D. Woods, a McGill professor and chairman of the federal government's task force on industrial relations.

Dr. Woods said "there are reasons to believe that centralized bargaining would be in the national interest" but it would require changes in union and management practices.

Mr. Drew said the government must have known of Dr. Woods' opinions because, four years ago, he was saying the same thing at the Labour College of Canada in Montreal.

At that time, said Mr. Drew, the argument was put by some union leaders of where the "norm" should be — should Esquimalt's fire committee, probing the joint police-fire structure, is still at the "inquiry stage," chairman Gerald Horne told Esquimalt council Monday night.

He said the committee still had two or more meetings to go before any recommendations would be made on whether to continue the integrated system. Questionnaires on the paid volunteer fire system have been sent to 20 fire departments in the province. The response has so far been excellent, said Coun. Horne. The committee has received 12 completed questionnaires.

The committee spent four hours at a closed meeting last week discussing the paid volunteer system and other possible solutions to Esquimalt's fire issue, said Coun. Horne.

PAID SYSTEM

A special fire committee meeting with city fire chief Eric Simmons, members of the Esquimalt police commission and a force officer will be held in camera Feb. 6 to discuss pros and cons of the paid volunteer system.

Coun. Horne said recommendations to council on the police-fire situation will probably result from further meetings.

Council also transferred title of two lots totalling $10,500 in the Rockheights subdivision to new owners. Fourteen of 27 lots have been sold since phase six of the development, opened six months ago.

Obstructing Police Brings 2-Month Term

A youth who obstructed policemen in what officers called "a near riot" outside a Broad Street dance hall early Sunday was jailed for two months Monday.

Gerald Harvey, 19, of 46 South Turner pleaded guilty when he appeared in central court.

Officers were called to the 1300 block Board to break up a fight, and had arrested two youths when Harvey kept interfering and shouting, despite three warnings, testimony indicated.

He was given a concurrent five-day term after pleading guilty to being a minor in possession of liquor. Officers found him with three bottles of liquor when checked outside the Government Street liquor store last month, court was told.

Wife Beats Devil

ENNA, Sicily (Reuters) — A 43-year-old woman told an investigating magistrate Monday she slew her husband with 18 axe blows because he had been trying to kill her with black magic. Every night for the last three years he had lit seven candles and prayed to the devil to let her die or go mad, she said.

Harvey's criminal record includes convictions for being unlawfully at large, for theft and for indecent assault.

DISTURBANCE

One of the youths involved in the fight which brought police to the scene was fined $50 when he pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance.

"You made a real nuisance of yourself," Magistrate O'Sullivan told Joseph Lawrence, 20, of 1427 Taunton.

The other youth involved in the fracas was scheduled to appear in juvenile court.

A street fight in the same block early Saturday cost one of the participants $25 when he appeared in court Saturday.

Gerald Zaleschuk of 430 Superior, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance.

One Labour Relations Act for the whole country, or all of the separate acts in unison with one another.

There are 11 jurisdictions in labor-management relations at present — the 10 provinces, covering the bulk of companies and workers, and the federal level, taking in certain industries such as shipping, railways and docks.

The division of jurisdiction was touched on at the International Brotherhood of Teamsters' convention last year.

TEAMSTERS

One resolution said the purpose of the teamsters is "to bring union wages, hours and conditions to the men and women of North America who labor for a living" and this purpose "is no different whether the activities be in the United States or Canada."

Then the resolution added: "In Canada, Teamsters work under both national and provincial labor laws which make it difficult indeed to achieve the purposes outlined above."

There would also have to be: A drive in those parts of Canada where "individuals are not making a living wage" to bring them up to the B.C. level;

BARGE FLIP SPARKS BIG LAWSUIT

A barge which turned upside down in Tahsis Harbor, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, is the subject of a weighty lawsuit which opened in Victoria Law Courts Monday.

The Tahsis Co. Ltd., owners of an extensive sawmill operation at Tahsis Inlet, claimed in Appeal Court $153,146 for loss and damage caused by the overturning barge.

Vancouver Tug Boat Co. denied allegations of negligence in delivery of the barge and appealed a Supreme Court decision in favor of the Tahsis company.

HOME GARDEN

Snowdrop Planting Takes Plan

By HILDA BEASTALL

Some plants thrive on treatment which is detrimental to others, and this is a fortunate fact to be used with advantage by gardeners.

Now, while we are enjoying this year's long display period of winter-aconites (Eranthis), Snowdrops (Galanthus) and winter-crocuses (Crocus species), we should start planting them exactly where we want them another year.

So often these small treasures of winter stray from their original location, popping up in the most unlikely spots where they contribute little to the main picture.

It is comforting to know that with careful handling these small bulbs will suffer no setback if they are dug now and moved. There is far less risk of losing the bulbs than when they are planted dry in September or October, at the time we plant the larger spring flowering bulbs.

The reason lies in the small size of winter-blooming bulbs. They are dug commercially when their foliage has matured, often in early June. Ideal planting time is within a month of digging, but few gardeners are prepared to put in bulbs during July.

LITTLE BULBS

This means the little bulbs lose their small store of moisture during the warm summer days and have deteriorated by fall planting time.

To move the aconite, snowdrop and crocus bulbs now, a small sized shovel is ideal for lifting groups of a kind with plenty of soil. The bulbs may be four to six inches down, unless planted last year when they are more likely to be only two to three inches deep.

Have holes of suitable size ready to receive each group of bulbs without separating or otherwise disturbing them. The soil from the new holes can be used to fill the spots from which the groups were taken.

Make each group firm in the soil, then stand back and admire your handiwork—these bulbs in full bloom just where you want them.

1,000 Attend Witness Rally

Nearly 1,000 Jehovah's Witnesses from many parts of southern Vancouver Island attended a circuit rally in S. J. Willis Junior Secondary School auditorium Saturday.

Arnold W. MacNamara flew out from headquarters in Toronto to address the meeting and showed colored slides of witness activities in Canada.

"The auditorium was so crowded we had to seat many of the congregation on the platform," said Pastor Clifford Roberts of Victoria.

not always able to say publicly what it is doing behind the scenes to promote peace in the war-torn country. Commitments had been made "to the parties involved in this matter" and if they were broken "our efforts would not be respected or trusted."

Mr. Martin said there had been criticism that Canadian-made arms sold to the U.S. were being used in Vietnam. But the arms were sent to the U.S. under a 1959 defence-sharing agreement with the approval of all sections of the Commons and of the people of Canada.

Mr. Douglas said the war is the greatest moral issue of our times.

"The time for quiet diplomacy is past; the time has come to speak out."

The NDP leader said he questioned Mr. Martin's courage in not spelling out his convictions that the bombing end and a settlement be reached.

PEACE

The United States must end its bombing of North Vietnam unconditionally and permanently before peace talks could begin.

Privately, he agreed with Wilson to try to obtain some reciprocal concessions from Hanoi to compensate for ending of American bombing. It was this hope that Kosygin could persuade Hanoi to modify its position that brought Wilson to Kosygin's hotel suite in a conference Monday at 1 a.m.

It was during that one-hour conference that Wilson learned that Hanoi would not budge, the official said.

The British government thereafter sympathized with President Johnson's decision that he could no longer hold back resumption of the bombing. The Viet Cong had used the lull to build up their supplies. The official said it would have been madness for the Americans to have maintained the bombing halt.

British authorities are convinced, however, that Kosygin wants to end the Vietnam war as quickly as possible. They also are convinced that the failure results not from lack of Soviet influence in Hanoi but from a lack of consensus among North Vietnam groups. While some Hanoi officials appeared ready to respond favorably to Kosygin's move, others followed a hard line of resistance.

Homer and Jethro Replaced by Lester

Recording stars Homer and Jethro have cancelled their scheduled week-long appearance at the Victoria International '67 Auto Show.

The recording artists will be replaced by Broadway and TV comic Jerry Lester, show officials announced today.

Appearing with Lester will be ventriloquist Clifford Guest and the previously scheduled entertainers Ricky Mann, accordionist and acrobatic juggler Carell Keath.

Show officials said one member of the Homer and Jethro team (they were uncertain which), had an ear operation last week. Doctors would not permit him to fly and cancellation was unavoidable.

Producer Mickey Levine said Mr. Lester will be more than a replacement. He is internationally known as a stand-up comic due to appearances on the Ed Sullivan Show, tours with Liberace and Danny Kaye and a role in the Broadway hit "A Funny Thing Happened to Me on the Way to the Forum".

Jerry Lester has appeared three times at the Cave in Vancouver and also has been a guest on the Johnnie Carson Show.

It was also announced today that local singer Jock Dunbar will be master of ceremonies for the show and will sing some of his favorites. Highway Minister Gagliardi was to appear at the opening show at Memorial Arena tonight.

The auto show doors will be open daily this week between 1 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Show times are 4:30, 7:15 and 10:15 p.m. daily.

Chaplin Film Rated Number One Comedy

OTTAWA (CP) — Charlie Chaplin's The Gold Rush, made 42 years ago, won unanimous choice as the greatest comedy film ever made in a poll of critics in 40 countries, the Canadian film archives reported Monday.

The 1925 motion picture about the rush to mine gold in the Yukon collected 40 votes in a poll conducted by the archives for the centennial commission.

A selection of the top-rated comedy films will be presented during a film festival here starting April 1.

Old-time comedies took the bulk of the honors. Only two pictures in the top 10 were made after the Second World War.

They are Les Vacances de M. Hulot, with Jacques Tati as star and director, made in 1953, and Kind Hearts and Coronets, a 1949 British film starring Alec Guinness and directed by Robert Hamer. The French film ranked fourth with 18 votes, the British film tied for seventh with 16 votes.

The General, a 1927 comedy produced by and starring deadpan comic Buster Keaton, stood second in the poll with 33 votes. Third was A Night at the Opera, a 1935 film directed by Sam Wood and starring the Marx brothers that got 22 votes.

The Marx brothers tied with Chaplin for fifth spot. Their 1933 film Duck Soup, directed by Leo McCarey, and Chaplin's Modern Times, made in 1936, deadlocked with 17 votes each.

France's Rene Clair directed Le Million, which tied with Kind Hearts and Coronets for seventh place.

The French director made the list again in the ninth spot with Un Chapeau de Paille d'Italie, a 1927 effort.

Safety Last, starring the acrobatic Harold Lloyd and directed by Sam Taylor and Fred Newmeyer, placed 10th. The film was made in 1923.

Girls Riot To Welcome 'Monkey'

LONDON (Reuters) — Hundreds of mini-skirted girls wild at London's Heathrow Airport Monday as 21-year-old Davy Jones of the Monkees pop-singing group flew in from the United States.

The 700-strong mob shrieking fans knocked over other passengers, forced their way through customs barriers and battled with policemen.

Some of them jumped over a railing onto the roof of the terminal and stood perched and screaming on a 12-inch ledge, 40 feet above the ground.

When Jones, the only British-born member of the four-man group, left the aircraft he was driven in a police car to the other side of the airport.

The girls then tried to storm their way through the landing field's gates guarded by 12 policemen. Police helmets went flying and many girls were bruised and without shoes and hats when the gates were finally slammed.

One pregnant woman was knocked down by the stampeding fans.

Brahms Works Difficult, Enchanting

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The lovely song waltzes of Brahms (Liebeslieder) are among the most idyllic and enchanting in the entire repertoire of music for small vocal and instrumental ensembles.

They are also intimate in style, imbued with the glow of 19th-century German romanticism, the lilt of Vienna—and difficult.

Guest Artist

In their presentation Monday night—to be repeated tonight—by the Amity Singers and guest artists Robin Wood and Winifred Scott, under the direction of Rodney Webster, they were considerably successful.

Mr. Webster has looked deeply into Brahms's nature, his intention and his personal attitude toward these two cycles encompassing the composer's affection for the vocal ensemble, the piano duet and the Viennese waltz.

He has captured the intimate character, the closely woven nature of the ensemble in which the piano duet is always an equal, sometimes a dominant partner.

The clear, fastidious conducting style he has developed and his sensitive feeling for phrase and shading result in an effect of grace and, at times an aquatint delicacy, but this tends to wash out at moments.

The 12 girls and 11 men of the Amity Singers produce a youthful, refined and true sound and when they unleash a forte it has excellent texture, is warm and well blended.

The blend is less satisfactory in pianissimo passages and it seems that in subduing the male voices to the ensemble concept, vitality both of tone and enunciation is weakened.

Vocal solo parts taken by Jill Paver, soprano, Pamela May, mezzo, Robert Hill, tenor, and David Conrad, bass, were indicative of the fine individual quality within this group.

Winifred Scott and Robin Wood as the piano duetists provide a flowing, rhythmically vital, ideally balanced instrumental part.

SONGS OF LOVE

The four Canadian songs and three English songs of love that introduce each half of the program, have in all but one instance, been arranged for the Amity Singers by Mr. Webster. The chorus reaches its finest level of achievement in these two groups—the lively Donkey Riding, the tender Passing By—but one must balance against this, the much greater reach of the Brahms works.

Rare and quite delightful, the pianists' rendering of the Mozart Sonata in D for piano-forte duet had a clear elegance and in the Andante movement an especially lovely singing style and soaring sense of phrase.

This fine partnership of Mr. Wood and Miss Scott was further explored with brilliance and rich color in three Slavonic Dances by Dvorak.

The repeat performance tonight begins at 8:30 p.m.

Made-in-Canada Actress Back After U.K. Success

Recipient of the 1966 Tyrone Guthrie Award, Roberta Maxwell is a "made in Canada" actress who is well on her way in a career that promises a rosy future.

She will be seen as the wealthy young widow, Olivia, in the Stratford Festival production of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night at the Royal Theatre next Wednesday.

This was the role she portrayed in last season's highly successful production at Stratford.

In The Government Inspector which the company will present on its first night in Victoria, Miss Maxwell will play Maria. Toronto-born, she began acting while still in high school, appearing professionally at the Crest Theatre and on CBC television programs.

She became the first apprentice actress with the Stratford Festival after artistic director Michael Langham saw her in audition at Hart House in 1957.

TWO YEARS

After two years with the company she went to England and appeared with various repertory groups, including the Ipswich and Cheltenham Companies.

Seasons of feature roles at the Crest, the Neptune in Halifax and Manitoba Theatre Centre occupied her until her return to the Stratford Festival last year.

Landmore Buys Galloway Herd

CLARESHOLM, Alta. (CP) — Rear-Admiral William Landmore of Nova Scotia has purchased the 17-head herd of purebred Galloway beef cattle owned by Orrin Hart of Clareholm.

Purchase price for the herd was not disclosed. The cattle will leave Clareholm for Nova Scotia about Feb. 22.

The cattle, imported by Mr. Hart from Scotland 11 years ago, are noted for their thick, long hair and ability to withstand cold.

Rear-Admiral Landmore retired from the navy after he was relieved of his post as commander of the maritime command in July, 1966. He was an outspoken critic of Defence Minister Hellyer's unification program for the armed forces.
